Soldiers and their Knapsacks. Much complaint has been made by the soldiers in our army of the exceedingly soldiers in our army of the exceedingly inconvenient manner in which knapsacks are constructed. There is nothing that so incommodes a soldier on the march, or more materially interferes with his movements on drill or parade than knapsacks as they have been accustomed to carry them. Thousands of dollars have been lost, either to the government or have been deducted from soldiers pay, owing to the fact marches, or unexpected retreats, the first incumbrance a soldier rids himself of is his knapsacks. When a General or regimental officer gives the command to march in light marching order, whapsacks are the first things that the men divest them selves of, and very gladly at that. It frequently happens that they are never recovered affer happens that the processional world and are favorable for the old ones, which were too light and the processional world and are favorable for the old ones, which were too light and the charming Carlotta Patti, with other arming Carlotta Patti, with other quently happens that they are never re-covered after being once dispensed with, and as a consequence serious losses are often entaited. The most prominent objection to the pervailing method of carrying knapsacks is the manner in which the straps that bind them to the back are constructed. These attempted in the property of the Pelymorama, have kindly tendered to the Pittsburgh Subsistence Committee a benefit, which has been accepted. The occasion a stress that soon becomes tire some to the bearer. Colonel Baxter, of the Fire Zbuayes, has given this matter for the bearer and has produced an imsome attention, and has produced an improvement that is calculated to almost entirely obviate this difficulty. The innovatirely obviate this difficulty. The innovation consists in two supports, composed of hickory wood, about one inch and a half in width and an eighth of an inch in thickness, that is fastened to the top of the knapsack by means of a strap, and hanging loose, extends down as far as the hip, when the knapsack is in proper position. These straps that pass so tightly under the arm on the knapsacks now in use, pass, by means of this improvement, over the shoulder, and are attached to the lower end of the supporter, thus giving entirely free play to the arms. The supporters can be easily detached from the knapsack, and be easily detached from the knapsack, and can be made very efficacious in carrying a
