PREPARED BY

DR. C. M. JACKSON, Philadelphia, Penna.

WILL EFFECTUALLY cure

Liver Complaint,

DYSPEPSIA, JAUNDICE,

Chronic or Nervous Debility, Diseases of the Kidneys, and all Diseases arising from a Disordered Liver or Stomach, such as Constipation, Inward Piles, Fullness or Blood to the Head, Acidity of the Stomach, Nausea, Heartburn, Disgust for Food, Fullness or Weight in the Stomach, Sour Eructations, Sinking or Fluttering at the Pit of the Stomach, Swimming of the Head, Hurried and difficult Breathing, Fluttering at the Heart, Choking or suffocating Sensations when in a lying posture, Dimness of Vision, Dots or webs before the sight, Fever and Dull Pain in the Head, Deficiency of Perspiration, Yellowness of the Skin and Eyes, Pain in the Side, Back, Chest, Limbs, &c. Sudden Flushes of Heat, Burning in the Flesh, Constant imaginings of Evil, and great depression of spirits.

And will positively prevent Yellow Fever, Bilious Fever, &c.

THEY CONTAIN

NEITHER ALCOHOL OR BAD WHISKY!

They will cure the above diseases in ninety-nine cases out of a hundred.

The sale and universal popularity of Hoofland's German Bitters, (purely vegetable) hosts of ignorant quacks and unscrupulous adventurers, have opened upon suffering humanity the flood gates of Nostrums in the shape of poor whisky, vilely compounded with injurious drugs, and christened Tonics, Stomachics and Bitters.

Beware of the innumerable array of alcoholic preparations in plethoric bottles, and big-bellied kegs, under the modest appellation of Bitters; which, instead of curing only aggravates diseases, and leaves the disappointed sufferers in despair.

YOU WANT SOMETHING to STRENGTHEN YOU!

YOU WANT A GOOD APPETITE!

DO YOU WANT TO BUILD UP YOUR CONSTITUTION!

DO YOU WANT TO FEEL WELL!

DO YOU WANT TO GET RID OF NER VOUS NESS!

DO YOU WANT TO GO OUT!

Do you want to sleep well?

Do you want a brisk and vigorous feeling?

THEN DO USE

HOOFLAND'S GERMAN BITTERS.

From J. Nelson Brown, D. D., Editor of the Encyclopedia of Religious Knowledge.

Although not disposed to favor or recommend Patent Medicines in general, through distrust of their ingredients and effects; I yet know of no sufficient reason why a man may not testify to the benefit he believes himself to have received from any simple preparation in the hope that he may thus contribute to the benefit of others.

I do this the more readily in regard to Hoofland's German Bitters, prepared by Dr. C. M. Jackson, of this city, because I was prejudiced against them for many years, under the impression that they were chiefly an alcoholic mixture. I am indebted to my friend Robert Shoemaker, Esq., for the removal of this prejudice by proper tests, and for encouragement to try them, when offering from great and long continued debility.

The use of three bottles of these Bitters, at the beginning of the present year, was followed by evident relief and restoration to a degree of bodily and mental vigor which I had not felt for six months before, and had almost despaired of regaining. I therefore thank God and my friend for directing me to the use of them.

J. NEWTON BROWN.

PHILADELPHIA, June 23, 1861.

From the Rev. Joseph H. Kennard, Pastor of the Tenth Baptist Church.

DR. JACKSON—DEAR SIR:—I have been frequently requested to connect my name with commendations of different kinds of medicine, but regarding the practice as out of my appropriate sphere, I have in all cases declined; but with a clear proof in various instances, and particularly in my own family, of the usefulness of Dr. Hoofland's German Bitters, I depart from my usual course, to express my full conviction that for general debility of the system, and especially Liver Complaint it is a safe and valuable preparation. In some cases it may fail, but usually I doubt not it will be very beneficial to those who suffer from the above causes. Yours very Respectfully,

J. H. KENNARD,

Eighth below Coates street. Dec. 24th.

From the Wife of ALDERMAN WUNDER, Germantown.

GERMANTOWN, June 1, 1861.

DR. C. M. JACKSON—Sir—It gave me pleasure, years ago, to give you a certificate, testifying to the benefit Hoofland's German Bitters had done for me. I am now perfectly cured of all those diseases your medicine professes to cure, viz: Dyspepsia, Chronic and Nervous debility, disease of the Kidneys, &c. The powerful influence it exerts upon Nervous prostration is surprising. I have been consulted frequently in reference to your Bitters, and without hesitation, have recommended it for the above complaints, and in every instance it has effectually cured. Your medicine has a great reputation in Germantown, and is sold in every Drug Store, and in most of the Grocery Stores here. If any one should question what I say, let them come to Germantown, and I will prove to their satisfaction, that the Bitters have cured in this vicinity more than twenty cases of the above disease.

Respectfully, HANNAH WUNDER.

Main street, above Rittenhouse, Germantown, Jan'a.

JUST THE THING FOR THE SOLDIERS.

Will build up the constitution, and give health and strength to an overtasked and diseased oalth.

THE TESTIMONY FROM THE ARMY.

PHILADELPHIA, August 12, 1862.

DR. C. M. JACKSON—Dear Sir: While in Virginia, owing to the change of water, I was taken with a severe diarrhœa, which seemed incurable, and which greatly weakened me. When I was reached Martinsburg, I feared I should have to come home; but noticing some of your Bitters in the store Mr. E. H. Price, in that town, purchased a supply, and on taking it was speedily restored to health. The diarrhœa was quickly checked, and I experienced no return of it. A number of my comrades, who suffered in the same manner and from the same cause, with whom I shared the Bitters, join me in this certificate. I expect to return to the seat of war with the Bitters in my knapsack. I would not be without it if its weight in gold, particularly on coming into a negrome region.

Yours, truly, A. E. ALTEMUS,

Company H, Scott Legion.

DAILY POST.

The Rebels and their Intercepted Correspondence.

The Richmond Examiner is on the rampage generally, and most furious against Benjamin for writing his portion of the dispatches intercepted not long since in the hands of Major Reid Saunders. Of that "pretty kettle of Confederate fish" it says:

"We gave yesterday a review of a mass of correspondence, published in the northern papers, purporting to be the official correspondence of the confederate government with its representatives and agent in England and France, and which is alleged was intercepted by the capture of a son of Mr George N. Saunders, while attempting to run the blockade at Charleston. It is to be regretted, and is a subject of wonder, that this correspondence, when he vessel was taken, was not destroyed or sunk to the bottom of the sea.

"As it is the enemy has got a full exposition of our affairs, and as much as has been said of information being given to the enemy by improper publications in the newspapers this single despatch bearer of Mr. Benjamin has furnished to the Yankees an amount of contraband intelligence that could not be gained from all the newspapers in the South for the next fifty years.

"It is also to be regretted that Mr. Benjamin, in his correspondence, should have indulged in such weak and offensive speculations relative to the Emperor of France. There was no occasion for it, and its only effect can be to offend and estrange the friendly interest the Emperor has evinced in the success of ourcause.

"The whole thing is an unfortunate affair, and the character of the information disclosed shows with what singular want of judgment the business of that depart-

"One of the important disclosures made to the enemy in this correspondence is the fact that the Confederate government has contracted, to be paid for in cotton, for the construction in England of six ironclad steamers of a peculiar class, combining the capacities of the freighting and fighting ships, in a manner which will enable them to force the blockade.

A Good Joke.

A few days since, an extra train, loaded with jackasses, was transported over the Louisville and New Albany Railroad. The telegraph operator at Salem, a boy, getting wind of it, sent a rumor that Gov. Morton, of Indiana, and Gov. Yates, of Illinois, accompanied by a large delegation of Republicans, with bands of music, etc., would pass through at a certain hour. Immense crowds of enthusiastic Republicans repaired to the depot, hats in hand, ready for the expected cheers. When the train thundered in, an aged and venerable owner of a pair of fabulous ears stuck his head out of a stock car, and gave vent to a long, agonizing hee-haw, that fairly shook the hills around; consternation seized the crowd, and in two minutes not a Republican was to be seen within a mile of the depot. Complaint has been made to the superintendent against the operator, and he is in momentary expectation of a notice to quit.—Northwest.

Extraordinary Caution.

There is a railroad out west which is bound to be on the safe side. It has a double track, and as the train once run off the track into another train approaching on the opposite track, the President issued the following order, which insured safety as long as it was strictly enforced: "Hereafter, when trains, moving in opposite directions are approaching each other on separate tracks, conductors and engineers will be required to bring their respective trains to a dead halt before the meeting, and be very careful not to proceed till each train has passed the other."

SELECT TALE.

A ROGUE'S LIFE.

WRITTEN BY HIMSELF.

"Most fortunately," continued Mr. Batterbury, with a strong emphasis on the words, and a fixed stare at me, "most fortunately, the servant had been careless enough to leave a bundle of clothes for the wash at the foot of the stairs, while she went to answer the door. Falling headlong from the landing, her ladyship pitched (pardon me the expression) pitched into the very middle of the bundle. She was a little shaken at the time; but is reported to be going on charmingly this morning. Most fortunate, was it not?—Seen the papers? Awful news from Demerara—the yellow fever——"

"I wish I was at Demerara!" said I in a hollow voice.

"You! Why?" exclaimed Mr. Batterbury, aghast.

"I am homeless, friendless, penniless," I went on, getting more hollow at every word. "All my intellectual instincts tell me that I could retrieve my position, and live respectably in the world, if I might only try my hand at portrait-painting—the thing of all others that I am naturally fittest for. But I have nobody to start me; no sitter to give me a first chance; nothing in my pocket but three-and-six pence; and nothing in my mind but a doubt whether I shall struggle on a little longer, or end it immediately in the Thames. Don't let me detain you from your walk, my dear sir. Those are the reasons why I wish I was at Demerara."

"Stop!" cried Mr. Batterbury, his mobogany face actually getting white with alarm. "Stop! don't talk in that dreadfully unprincipled manner—don't, I implore you, my dear sir. You have plenty of friends—you have me and your sister.—Take to portrait-painting—think of your family, and take to portrait painting!"

"Where am I to get a sitter?" I inquired, with a gloomy shake of the head.

"Me," said Mr. Batterbury, with an effort. "I'll be your first sitter! As a beginner, and especially to a member of the family, I suppose your terms will be moderate. Small beginnings—you know the proverb." Here he stopped, and a miserly leer puckered up his mahogany cheeks.

"I'll do you life size, down to your waistcoat, for fifty pounds," said I.

Mr. Batterbury winced, and looked about him to the right and left, as if he wanted to run away. He had five thousand a year, but he contrieved to look, at that moment, as if his utmost income was five hundred.

I walked on a few steps.

"Surely those terms are rather high to begin with," he said, walking after me. "I should have thought five and thirty or perhaps forty——"

"A gentleman, sir, cannot condescend to bargain," said I, with mournful dignity. "Farewell!" I waved my hand and crossed over the way.

"Don't do that!" cried Mr. Batterbury. "I accept. Give me your address. I'll come to-morrow. Will it include the frame? Those fine old frames are going now? To the colorman's, he dosen't live in the Strand, I hope—or near one of the bridges. Think of Annabella, think of the family, think of the fifty pounds—an income, a year's income to a prudent man. Pray, pray be careful and compose your mind—promise me, on pour word of honor, to compose your mind!"

I left him still hanging on that string, and suffering, I believe, the only serious attack of mental distress that had ever affected him in the whole course of his life.

Behold me, then, now starting afresh in the world, in the character of a portrait-painter; with the payment of my remuneration from my first sitter depending whimsically on the life of my grandmother.

CHAPTER II.

I gave my orders to the color-man and settled matters with my friend the artist that day. The next morning, before the hour at which I expected my sitter having just now, as much interest in the life of Lady Malkinshaw as Mr. Batterbury had in her death, I went to make kind inquires after her ladyship's health. The answer was most reassuring. Lady Malkinshaw was quite well; and was, at that very moment, meritoriously and heartily engaged in eating her breakfast. My prospects now being of the best possible kind, I felt encouraged to write once more to my father, telling him of my fresh start in life, and proposing a renewal of our acquaintance. I regret to say that he was so rude as not to answer my letter.

Mr. Batterbury was punctual to the moment. He gave a gasp of relief when he beheld me, full of life, with my palette on my thumb gazing fondly on my new canvass. "That's right!" he said. "I like to see you with your mind composed. Annabella would have come with me; but she has a slight head-ache this morning. She sends her love and best wishes."

I seized my chalks and began with that confidence in myself that has never forsaken me in any emergency. Being perfectly well aware of the absolute dependence of the art of portrait-painting on the art of flattery, I determined to start with making the mere outline of my likeness a compliment to my sitter. It was much easier to resolve on doing this than really to do it. In the first place my hand would relapse into its wicked old caricaturing habits. In the second place, my brother-in-law's face was so inveterately and completely ugly as to set every artifice of pictorial improvement at flat defiance. When a man has a nose an inch long, with the nostrils set perpendicularly, it is impossible to flatter it. When a man has no perceptible hyeline, and when his eyes globularly project so far out of his head that you expect to have to pick them up for him whenever you happen to see him lean forward, how are mortal fingers and brushes to diffuse the right complimentary expression over them? You must either do them the most hiedous and complete justice, or give them up altogether. The late Sir Thomas Lawrence, P.R. A., was undoubtedly the most artful and uncompromising flatterer that ever smoothed out all the natural characteristic blemishes from a sitter's face; but even that accomplished parasite would have found Mr. Batterbury too much for him, and would have been driven, for the first time in his practise of art, to the uncustomary and uncourtly resource of absolutely painting a genuine likeness.

As for me I put my trust in Lady Malkinshaw's power of living, and portrayed Mr. Batterbury in all his native horror.—At the same time, I sensibly guarded against even the most improbable accidents, by making him pay me the fifty pounds as we went on, by instalments. We had ten sittings. Each one of them began with a message of Annabella, a love and apologies for not being able to come and see me. Each one of them ended with an argument between Mr. Batterbury and me relative to the transfer of five pounds from his pocket to mine. I came off victorious on every occasion—being backed by the noble behavior of Lady Malkinshaw, who had abstained from tumbling down, and who ate and drank, and slept, and grew lusty for three weeks together. Venerable woman! She put fifty pounds into my pocket. I shall think of her with gratitude and respect to the end of my days.

One morning, while I was sitting before my completed portrait, inwardly shuddering at the ugliness of it, a suffocating smell of musk was wafted into the studio; it was followed by a sound of rustling garments; and that again was succeeded by the personal of my affectionate sister, with her husband at her heels. Annabella had got to the end of her stock of apologies, and had come to see me.

She put her handkerchief to her nose the moment she entered the room. "How do you do, Frank? Don't kiss me; you smell of paint, and I never could bear paint."

I felt a similar antipathy to the smell of musk, and had not the slightest intention of kissing her; but I was too gallant a man to say so, and I only begged her to favor me by looking at her husband's portrait.

Annabella glanced all round the room, with her handkerchief still at her nose, and gathered her magnificent silk dress close about her superb figure with her disengaged hand. "What a horrid place!" she said faintly, behind her handkerchief. "Can't you take some of the paint away? I'm sure there's oil on the floor. How am I to get past that nasty table with the palette on it? Why can't you bring the picture down to the carriage, Frank?" Advancing a step or two, and looking suspiciously about her while she spoke, her eyes fell on the chimney-piece. An eau-de-cologne bottle stood upon it, which she took up immediately with a languishing sigh.

It contained turpentine for washing brushes in. Before I could warn her, she had sprinkled herself liberally with half the contents of the bottle. In spite of all the musk that now filled the room, the turpentine betrayed itself almost as soon as I cried "Stop!" Annabella, with a shriek of disgust, flung the bottle furiously into the fire-place. Fortunately it was summer time, or I might have had to echo the shriek with a cry of "Fire."

"You wretch! you brute! you low, miserable, mischievous, swindling black-guard!" cried my amiable sister, shaking her skirts with all her might, "you have done this on purpose. Don't tell me!—What do you mean by pestering me to come to this dog-kennel of a place?" She continued, turning fiercely upon the painter or her existence and legitimate receptacle of all her superfluous wrath.—"What do you mean by bringing me here, to see you swindled? Yes, sir, swindled.—He has no more idea of painting than you have. He has cheated you out of your money. If he was starving to-morrow he would be the last man in England to make way with himself—he's too great a wretch—his too vicious—he is too lost to all sense of respectability—he is too much of a discredit to his family. Take me away. Give me your arm directly. I told you not to go near him from the first. This comes of your blind fondness for money. What is three thousand pounds to you? My dress is ruined. My shawl is spoilt. He, he, he!—Frank, you brute! Give me your arm. No! Go to my father. My nerves are torn to pieces. I am giddy, faint, sick—sick Mr. Batterbury! I want advice. Give me your arm. Go to my father. Take me away. Call the carriage." Here she became hysterical and vanished, leaving a mixed odor of musk and turpentine behind her, which preserved the memory of her visit for nearly a week afterwards.

Another scene in the drama of my life seems likely to close in before long," thought I. "No chance of getting my amiable sister patronizing struggling genius. Do I know of anybody else who will sit to me? No, not a soul. Having thus no portraits of other people to paint, what is it my duty, as a neglected artist, to do next? Clearly to take a portrait of myself."

I did so, making my own likenes quite a pleasant relief to the ugliness of my brother-in-law's. It was my intention to send both portraits to the Royal Academy Exhibition, to get custom, and show the public what I could do. I knew the institution with which I had to deal, and called my own likeness Portrait of a Nobleman. That dexterous appeal to the tenderest feelings of my distinguished countrymen very nearly succeeded.

PITTSBURGH PRODUCE MARKET.

OFFICE OF THE DAILY POST,
Tuesday, Feb. 10th, 1863.

Remarks—The weather has again changed, and we have now what may be termed mild winter weather. Our rivers are again on the rise with sufficient water for tall ordinary purposes. Flour—The market yesterday presented no new features; the sales partook altogether of a local character; holders are firm in their views whilst buyers take hold very sparingly. The Eastern markets were quiet with but little disposition to operate to any extent. Bacon—Market firm with a good demand. We note pretty liberal sales for this market. The stock on hand is ample for all regular purposes. Oils—The meeting at the Exchange yesterday was well attended. We are glad of this and hope to see the interest in this undertaking increasing, if carried on properly it cannot fail to be a benefit to all concerned in getting it up. The sales made will be found in another part of this report. Crackers—Dealers have increased their rates from ¼ to 1 cent per pound. Grain—The market is firm with a fair demand; transactions limited on account of light receipts. Seeds—The demand for Clover was good. The supply to operate on is very limited.

Butter—Sales 5 bbls choice Roll, 24@25c; 5 bbls do 23c.

Eggs—Sales of 6 bbls at 17c; 4 do 18c; 4 do 17c; market firm.

Lard—Sales prime 10½c.

Lard Oil—Sales 25 bbls 88@90c.

PORK PACKING ITEMS.

Cincinnati.

The calm in the Provision market continues.—Lard is about the only article that receives any attention. It, however, is irregular, and buyers claim concessions. Packers of favorite known brands, stand for 10c. Sales of some lots of city on Saturday, and of prime country, have been made at 9½c. While he bears offers of 9c for a prime article of city at 9¾c, we were also advised of a demand at that figure. With dealers in this condition can't meet, seems rather difficult of comprehension; but it is to be inferred that there are conditions connected with the proposition of one or both of them that are not complied with.

Chicago.

The provision market was inactive and almost nominal. There was a fair inquiry for prime city Lard at 9½, but most holders were asking 9¾c.

Live Hogs were steady and firm at $3 35@3 95 for common to good and $4 00@4 50 for good to choice.

Dressed Hogs continue to be in active demand and prices were a shade firmer. The bulk of the sales were at $4 10@4 80 for lots dividing on 200 pounds, but some extra choice lots sold at $4 15@4 85.

Cincinnati Seed Market.

The offerings of Clover are more liberal and the demand less active. 150 bus sold at $7 75, and one lot of 50 bus at $8 15, but this was above the market, as it could have been bought at the close at $7 75. Timothy is held at $2 75, and is selling in small lots at this figure.

RIVER NEWS

Cincinnati.

The river here has fell 3 feet during the past twenty-four hours. The Lower Ohio, Cumberland and Tennessee are in fine navigable order. With no rumors of freshets are offered freely for Pittsburgh and Nashville, at advanced rates.

The Armenia left for Pittsburgh, and the propeller Dispatch for Madison. The Armenia was full of freight and people.

Until further notice, no permits will be issued from the Custom House in this city for shipments to the Cumberland river. The reason assigned is that this stream is infested with guerrillas.

Louisville.

The river is falling pretty rapidly, having declined 3 feet during the twenty-four hours ending last evening, leaving 6 feet 6 inches water in the canal.—The weather was clear and cold.

The Nevada went down over the falls on Sunday evening, but did not get out for St. Louis until yesterday. Her movements were, therefore, unknown to her agents here.

New Albany.

A number of coal boats were sunk along the shore between Pearl street and the upper ferry landing last night, by the ferry boat, which slipped her moorings and got adrift.

Over 500,000 bushels of coal passed this port yesterday for points down the river.

Nashville.

Yesterday the weather was very cold and cloudy and at night it commenced snowing quite steady. The river was slowly receding with 8 feet water on the shoals.

Memphis

The Glasgow arrived yesterday from St. Louis; the Kenton, Brazil and Volunteer, from Helena; and City of Alton and Forest Queen from Vicksburg. The J. D. Perry goes out this evening for St. Louis, and the City of Alton is for the same destination. The Brazil and Kenton leave to-day for Helena.
