The Snow---The Sleighing---The Passenger Railways.

The atmosphere yesterday was moderately warm, but the sky was overcast with clouds which threatened rain, and the few sun rays which penetrated through them had little effect upon the show, much to the delicate of the winder to enjoy the delight of those who wished to enjoy a merry sleigh-ride. The sleighing in the a merry sleigh-ride. The sleighing in the city is, good and in the country very fine, better than for years past. The livery stable keepers are reaping a rich harvest from such of our amusement-seekers as cannot forego the temptation to spend a day or night. We do not know what the prices are regulated by, but "tariff" the prices are regulated by, but figures are very high and we hear numerous complaints from the young men (who generally care little for the expense, so ous complaints from the young men (who generally care little for the expense, so long as they enjoy themselves) that the tax is very "steep." Ten dollars for an afternoon or night is, we understand, the price for a double leam and in one case five dollars was charged for a single cutter, half a day. Of course it is right that those who keep sleighs, bells, robes, &c., (which are so much dead capital) the entire year morder to have them for a few re year an order to have them for a few days in the winter, to accommodate the public, should get a good price for them, but the figures named do seem rather ex orbitant. Still there is an immense de and for these vehicles, which are engaged or days ahead, and so long as those who the them are willing to pay the prices asked by those who have them for hire re can be little ground for complaint. hope all may enjoy themselves while snow lasts and that the livery stable oprietors may be well paid for their

Bold Larceny by a "'Domestic.'' One day last week a neat looking girl (now believed to a professional thiel) applied for a place at the residence of a gentleman on Penn street, was immediately employed and at once installed. She did her work well and by the next day had be compounte a favorite in the household.—At supper time she went into the dining room and asked if she was wanted. Being tolk no, she yaid she wished to go to a relative's, a few doors off to get a dress and would return in a few minutes. Supper would return in a few minutes. Supper over the servant was wanted, and repeated ringing failing to bring her, search was made for her, but without effect, and it made for her, but without effect, and it was spon ascertained she had managed to take away a set of fine furs, some dresses and other clothing belonging to the lady of the house—together with her jewelry boxy containing a valuable gold watch, three full sets of iewelry and other trinkets box containing a valuable gold watch, three full sets of jewelry and other trinkets and articles of vertu. voted to voting on amendments without debate, and then the bill voted on without further preliminary. Mr. Stevens argued that the troops proposed to be raised under the bill, was in no wise a militia but a national force, and as such was warranted by the Constitution. It was a benevolent and benificent bill. The clamor in and out of this Congress had so frightened a timid Senate that they dared not pass a bill passed by the House, which would have given us half a million of troops. This bill, therefore, became the conly remedy. For six months past a large party had been discouraging volunteering as far as possible, going from house to house and from town to town, persuading them to stay at home. Hence, in the same States demagogues carried the election.
