ted it to the very marrow; and in order to show our readers how it crouches and cries under the infliction, we copy from its Saturday's issue an article, which we ask every one of our readers to peruse.

It is a singular production for a piqus particle, which we have and per, in which the ruffian, the knave and hypocrite are palpably visible. As long as we confined our chastisement of the Gazette to merely political strictures, it exhibited but little sensibility; but when we exposed its traffic in the "French preventive," and compelled it to disgorge and pay back the "green-backs" it received for advertising the "toll," then it began to writhe like a wounded "copper-head." Its malady, it will be seen, by the article referred to, has been incressing; it raved like that unfortunate fishwoman to which itso frequently and grows parrylons and nonsensical in its en. it so frequently and gracefully alludes, and grows garrings and nonsensical in its engrows garrings and nonsensical in its ended obscurity, so far as the general public are concerned, who never see much of its fitthy stuff. unless when it can provoke over, is not to discuss the Gasstte's half column of ribald vulgaarity, about fidmon the Chrontele, or ourselves, to bring it into notice by a quotation—precisely in such a vixehish fishwoman's style, we say, the Fost has been bawling at the Gasette for seeks past houng to induce us to political opponents. Nicknames are thought so unlikely as that it should quoose readly applied but they carry little weight with them. In the contest between the North and South, however, we see two filthy class of advertisements was inadvertible traitors: they are tentiv inserted in our columns, two or the leaders of the Southern rebellion and three times, before the character of it was the Abolition conspirators of the North. But we do not include the people of the Gazette in the latter class; they have not the biains to be conspirators; they are merely the blind and fanatical followers of those who have been successfully conspiring against the existence of the American Union, and who have been laboring to classes who are really traitors; they are tently inserted in our columns, two or the leaders of the Southern rebellion and three times, before the character of it was Union, and who have been laboring to interpretation of its daily fury at the Garrolong, the war, in order that it may zette; whose wish has been to recognize it who take of peace, who regrets that the described. But been the continue of t rebellion ever began, is so hounded and threatened by these parasites, who are gorging the riselves upon the sweat and agony of a suffering people. With military commissions and civil offices in protection, which enable these vultures to live in idleness and lixuriate on large salaries, they insolently lift their brazen faces and cry "traitor" at svery one who questions their infallibility An imbecile President may this hour ridicule the messiciency of that which he declares to be all important the next, and his whime must be respected as if they were the decisions of our courts. Or, if we exercise that angient privilege of luquiry in them, some paymaster, or postmaster or assessor, or tax gatherer, or military gentlemen, who is dependent upon war for subsistence, expects to stifle equity by crying out "traitors!" The half dozen pensiones in and about the Gazette may erjoy their pickings and stealings, and flaunt keir accumulated green backs; they may prolong their terms of office by prolonging the war; they may howl themselves hoarse against every one who desires to see peace once more bless our land; but they will not succeed in pre venting us from investigating the purpose of those who have in their hands the destiny of our country, and the lives and liberties of our people and ourselves.

The judiciary committee of the House eported a bill this morning to repeal the xisting laws exempting clergymen from taxation, and placing them on the same footing with persons engaged in all other classes of business. The bill has been presented here for several years past; but this is the first time that they have been able to obtain a report. The interference in politics by such men as Beecher, Chee ver, and others, and their efforts to em-bitter the people of different sections against each other, are the cause of the success in getting the report at this time.
