LOYALTY AND DISLOYALTY. The anxiety manifested by some of the radical editors and politicians of the country to fasten the charge of disloyalty gress, and we presume that the contest so upon their political opponents involves them in most absurd and irretrievable mined that ever took place in New Engconfusion. Some of these persons declare land. The national administration, rethat loyalty means not merely support of duced to the desperation of defeat, has passive support of the national Adminis-tration; and to doubt or discuss the propriety or efficacy of its most absurd, mischievous and destructive measures, is nothing more nor less than disloyalty to Abolition ticket; the ablast Abolition the government. It is true that these speakers have thoroughly canvassed the Abolition editors and speakers exercise the largest liberty themselves, in the discussion of public questions, but this is quite another matter. To think as they do and act accordingly is loyalty to the government, although some of their enactments are avowedly subversive of the very genius of our policical system.

Among the many who rush to thes extremities we know of no one who excels the Pittsburgh Dispatch. In its issue o Saturday it had a column of garbled extracts from a number of Democratic papers, with running comments, in which the writer, evidently had no idea of what this is about the proportion throughout the he was writing about. He desired to fix the charge of disloyalty against political opponents, and resorted to the contemptible means of quoting some silly resolutions passed at some obscure country meetings. This foolish and criminal conduct of the Disparch, would, if applied to the opponents of the Democratic party, convict the whole of them of disloyalty to the Constitution. But, in order to show the guage by which our neighbor measnres one's loyalty, we copy the following resolution, passed at a Democratic meeting in Moon township, in this county, which the Dispatch informs us is a "direct endorsement of the doctrine upon which March: ecession is based :''

Without attempting to prove wherein the "heresy" of this resolution consists, the Dispatch, in a truly genuine abolition spirit, suggests, for those who passed it, and for those who believe in it, "swift and for those who believe in it, "swift proceeded to the consideration of the House amendments to the Senate bill leinclined to conclude that the writer who penned these words did not know what he was writing about, or if he did he must a section similar to that defeated in the House, requiring the State to refund these have been ignorant of the force and meaning of his suggestions
