THE THE PERSON AND TH

Keep Cool. We hope we will be excused for suggesting to our readers, both old and young, the necessity of exercising coolness and prudence, amid the many startling rumor that are now affoat in the city in reference to the approach of the rebels. While every precaution should be taken to prevent ar alarm, and every arrangement should be promptly made to go to the assistance of those who are in the most immediate danger, all should remember that first reports are the most alarming. Indeed we have not heard of a battle or a raid since the commencement of this unfortunate rebellion. in which the first statement of it did not largely exceed the true account subse-quently received. That five thousand rebel cavalry are now in Morgantown, we do not believe, because we are very confi-dent that so large a body of men and horses could not be moved any great distance, without news of their approach having reached us before this time, and it is equalreached us before this time, and it is equally impossible that so great a number of troops of that kind could or would be spared from the main body of the rebel army, for the purpose of making a mere raid into Western Virginia or the border counties of our own State. which horder counties of our own State, which, in our opinion, is all the most sanguine rebel officer could hope to accomplish. rebel officer could hope to accomplish. However, as we have before remarked, all hands should prepare with a will for the worst, remembering at the same time to listen to all the flying rumors with several grains of allowance, and not permit themselves to be frightened, flurried or excited.

A soldier who goes into battle trembling sake he does remain in the ranks, to be hit, either by his companions or the enemy. It is the perfectly cool, intrepid soldier, who is devoid of everything like flurry, blustering, or excitement, who is to be depended on. The men whom you see and hear the most conspicuous on the corners corclude by again urging our readers not to become unduly excited, or unnecessarily tended. to become unduly excited, or unnecessarily alarmed. Let every man, should danger beset our heretofore peaceful homes, act promptly, cooly and bravely, and no serious trouble need be apprehended.

From Harrisburg—Gov. Curtir on the Raid.

Besides in the case now referred to, there is no doubt, if the government would advance the money to build a line of telegraph from this city along the Pittsburgh and Connellsville road to Uniontown, and from thence to Morgantown, the railroad company or other capitalists would, when peace was restored, and the government desired to part with the improvement, refund the amount of cost. By all means there should be a line of telegraph established on this route, with the least possible delay.

Money Getting Plenty. The amount required to pay off the army up to the 1st of March is near sixty n of dollars. More than the entire receipts of gold from California received any year. This amount of capital added to the already flush money market must simulate all branches of trade. One who is well posted says that over h half million of dollars will come into Pittsburgh during the next thirty days. By the 1st of May it will take thirty millions more to pay up the troops, when more money will be flowing in. This, with the amount paid out here on Government contracts for iron gunboats, the building of steamers, the receipts from coal, the outlay in the large receipts of gold from California received number of buildings going on in our city will give farmers and all others plenty of money to improve in all directions.
