Aroused by this unexpected and cheering sight, I renewed my exertions, and succeeded, after a territial estruggle, in reaching the shelter which was to save use from cruel death. The house to which I dragged my frozen limbs was a rough building of logs. Constructed more for strength than beauty. I applied my stick to the door, which was depened by a man, whose figure was imperceptible in the surrounding gloom, but the land of the point of prayer to heaven—and all life without hope—woe, woe, eternal woe:

my towering hopes were destroyed at once and forever.

"Before telling you the horrid secret that like raging fire consumes my heart, I wish to revert, for a short period, to the days of my boyhood at Greenway Park and the family residence.

"My father was a very stern man, and full of pride for the family of which he was the head. My mother, on the contrary, was one of those sweet, angelic

The effort was in vain. I, and during the whole of the rose colored days of my youth, he was at college, while I remained at home amid the delightful bower of Greenway Park.

"Thus passed the blissful period of my youth, until I was eighteen years, old when the event happened which was destined, after a brief but sweet dream, to change the color of my life from sunshine to shadow, from light to darkness—to make ma what I am.

"A few months before my departure to Oxford to complete my education, Lillian Paget, my father's ward, came to reside at Greenway Park. She was one of the richest heiresses in England.

I could not be the daily companion of this fascinating woman without loving her. It was natural for me to love Lillian as it was for the eagle to love the glorious sun, She made this world a naredies for me.

New York Cattle Market. Tribune's Report.

Second Day.

Trespay, May 5th.—None of the cattle he'd out by agreement at Albany have come forward, and only 56 have come in fresh from there, but there are a few that were held out over the river on sale this morning, and all of the "reserve" from that side have been or will be sold to-day, and it is now said that the Albany reserve will not number over eight or nine hundred, and, therefore, will not materially affect the market next week. Perhaps not; yet it was in our opinion, a most expressions blunder on the part of its movers, the leader of which is known as "President of the Sugar Company, a title given to a combination whose particular object appears to be to "sweeten the butchers," Second Day.
