As a people, they have no purpose to serve in striking down a public servant, unless he has proved to be unfaithful to his trust and to their sense of justice I appeal, tho' the circumstances attending my accusation compel me to add to my statement a few words personal to myself.

My profession is that of arms. I was educated to it as a pupil of the nation.—
My duty and inclination leading the same path, with the feeling that stirred the nation's pulse when its flag was torn down and whatever was enwrapt within my life, to the defence of my country.

I t says:

"While our troops in thousands have been sent to the battle field to west their lives in fruitless accounters or by dread missma, we have tolerated in our midst—have feeted and glorified—the discretibles who have been laboring without cessation to say, the very foundation of the Government—by destroying the counters of the people. Demands and alienting the support of the people. Demands the view of the people and whatever was enwrapt within my life, to the defence of my country. I did not underrate the proportions of the rebellion, underrate the proportions of the rebellion, and I accepted my line of duty with the conviction that the nation would require of its loyal children determined purpore and, perhaps, great sacrifices. Defore its unity would be restored. White these convictions, I took command of a brigade in the Army of the Potorate in June, 1861. From that time until I was relieved from duty with the Asarca of the Potorate in June, 1861. The point out all of those who along to do my duty in camp and upon the field.
