

Did the state Secretary answer this inquiry? not a bit of it. Did he, his private Secretary? not he; but a Mr. Somebody did, and what did he say? simply that he could not find it in Mr. Seward's correspondence; but that had the ingenious individual extended his investigation he might have found it in the correspondence of the English Minister.

ANOTHER RAID UPON GEN. McCLELLAN

For some cause or other the radicals have again opened their batteries upon the illustrious body of poor McClellan; his "indecency" and suspected "treason" rendered him so obnoxious, that for six months, we have been reassured, by his persecutors, that he is gone beyond any possibility of resurgence. We are very well convinced, in our own mind, that he is indeed gone, so far as the command of the army in Virginia is concerned; because we cannot imagine any possible contingency which can arise, sufficient to induce those who have been slandering him so long, to acknowledge his baseness by his restoration. There has been too much time spent in making out a case against McClellan for us to hope for his being restored to the position from which he was removed.

THE 130TH PENNSYLVANIA REGIMENT

We have seen letters from private and officers in the Army of the Potomac, speaking in the highest terms of the gallantry and steadiness of the 130th regiment, Col. Collier. One of the privates occupying the heights of Fredericksburg and under a terrific fire the regiment stood alone, and in retiring formed the rear guard, fighting in line to the position of the gallant corps.

Correspondence of the Post

COL. CLARKE'S REGIMENT

The 120th regiment of Pennsylvania volunteers, commanded by Col. Clarke, are now at Camp Curtin, waiting to be ordered to the front. They are a well equipped and drilled body of men, and their conduct at the battle of Antietam was highly creditable to their commander and to themselves.

Keyes and Richmond

The movement of Gen. Keyes into Richmond, and the subsequent operations of the army, have been the subject of much discussion. It is believed that the capture of Richmond will be a decisive blow to the Confederate cause.

Whether the Dispatch's frequent

Whether the Dispatch's frequent efforts in behalf of the Administration, are acceptable to the different departments from which it receives occasional favors, or not, we, of course, have no knowledge; and, however, ought to make up for its want of impartiality by its adherence to the truth. It is a common error to suppose that the Administration is a single, unprincipled, and unscrupulous man, who is ready to sacrifice the interests of his country to his personal ambition.

Rumors and Speculations--The Route to Richmond--Losses of the Union and Confederate Forces

The Washington Chronicle, of yesterday, has the following item: "It is stated that the President yesterday received a dispatch from the army of the Potomac, announcing that Gen. Lee had requested that he be permitted to see the bodies of the soldiers who were killed at the battle of Antietam, and that the President had consented to his request."
