

The Union as it was ;

THURSDAY MORNING, MAY 14.

THE POSITION OF THE DE REPUBLICAN AUTHORITY.

The great primary difficulty with the opponents of the Democracy is, that they confound the government with the administration of it, and consequently a passive support of the latter as a test of loyalty to the former. Starting with this stupendous fallacy entails upon them all the danger-ous consequences which necessarily follow. We need not dwell upon this fatal error, because the dullest understanding can perceive that if it is once conceded, our rulers are absolute in authority, and can, because of a presumed necessity, commit any outrage or folly in defiance of all constitutional or popular restraint. The Democracy are inexorably opposed to the cessation of hostilities until the rebellion is crushed, but if some wise man were to rise up and demonstrate how the Union configuration of paternal blood, we presume that no find the prosume adulation. The Evening did the Tribune, determined upon the fulsome adulation. The Evening form the day they found they could not use him and criticised, without mercy, every move he made or suggested. Not so the pettifogging Times; and blow them into fragments, besides of the ammunition chests of the enemy, and again was the enemy compelled to flee in disorder from the field. Our lines of skirmishers fell back in confusion, and in ten minutes from the time an advance was commenced by them, they had reached a point in the woods of him as it was previously fulsome in its abuse of him as it was previously fulsome in its abuse of him as it was previously fulsome in its abuse of him as it was previously fulsome in its abuse of him as it was previously fulsome in its abuse of him as it was previously fulsome in its abuse of him as it was previously fulsome in its abuse of him as it was previously fulsome in its abuse of him as it was previously fulsome in its abuse of him as it was previously fulsome in its abuse of him as it was previously fulsome in its abuse of him as it was previously fulsome in its abuse of him as it was previously fulsome in its abuse of him as it was previou of paternal blood, we presume that no Lincoln himself. The extreme Radicals The masses then should not be carried away by incessant and senseless clamor, but heed the teachings of those who are simply for the restoration of our Union. The Democracy are for sustaining the government, and they conceive that the best way of doing it is the holding of those number of the court journal in question: government, and they conceive that the best way of doing it is the holding of those who are entrusted with its management to a strict, exacting and rigid accountability. This is not only the privilege, but it is the duty of every citizen. In order to many thoroughly and something and shall insist upon the property and something and shall insist upon the content that he should are main where he belongs, and shall insist upon the content that he should remain where he belongs and shall insist upon the content that he should remain where he belongs and shall insist upon the content that he should remain where he belongs and shall insist upon the content that he should remain where he belongs and shall insist upon the content that he should are main where he belongs and shall insist upon the content that he should are many thorough the content that he should are many that the should are many to more thoroughly impress this upon these who differ from us, we quote the following, not from Democratic, but from Republican authority, the author of it

The death of the intrepid General Jackson was announced in yesterday's paper.

Alluding to our civil war the general I tell you frankly, I was prepared fully, knowing the bitter feeling that has grown up, for a desperate struggle. I believed that it would come, and that it would test the strength of the country. I had some the strength of the country. I had some expectations were wouldy disappointed. The taking of Fort Sumter put the question at rest forever. I did at one time, the high that peace would, in the long run; be made, that after one or two severe from our commanding Generals—from the engagements perhaps the people would. The strength of the country is the strength of the country. I had some ting in, our forces retired unmolested and in good order to the other side of the considerate treatment of a gallant remnant of a brigade that had never once failed once to do its duty most liberally and heroically almost unfitted me to remain in command. True, however, to those who had been true to me; true to a position which I considered sacred under the circumstances. I remained with what the circumstances. I remained with what the circumstances. Iwent to fight armies and not to plunder. It that conduct be unfaithfulness to the country then I am guilty. My hand and conduct are unstained by plunder or spectulation. It is strange that I was one of the first old officers attacked by our friends, the Abolitionists; and no position, high or low, could be held without their favor. It was I suppose, an Irishman's luck. All who go to the battle fields of the past two years, will find, however, as many Irishmen lying

One thing I have to say to night is, that I have no cause of complaint against the President. The Administration always treated me with kindness. They endeavoured to promote and place me in positions of know. The radicals, however opposed me. I was not required, because, I would not aid them in their policy, but when the President and Cabinet found for our levelty our presidence of a very construction. they could not promote me, they did the next best thing; they refused to send me
