The speech of Mr. Utermehle was frequently and heartily applauded.

RESPONSE OF CEN. N°LUELLAN.

General McClellan stated, in reply, that it was with unusual pride and satisfaction that he received this token of the confidence and esteem of the Common Council and citizens of Washington, not only because it is the Capital of the nation, but because its people were the first thrown into the path of this civil war and the first to encounter its dangers. Had your people (said he) not been loyalty of their noble conduct in that crisis of the country. AcBut he hoped no necessity of their noble conduct in that crisis of the country. He felt doubly honored that so many respectable citizens of Washington had taken the trouble; to come such a long distance for the purpose of presenting him with such a complimentary testimonial, and he begged them to receive his most heartfelt thanks, and also to convey to the people of Washington the assurance of his appreciation of this token of their esteem and confidence. In conclusion, he heart hear

NEAR GRAND GULF, Miss. Wednesday, April 29, 1863. This day, which a year ago was signalorleans by the Union forces, has been again rendered memorable by one of the fercest and longest contested naval engagements of the war. The long promised, and, as some think, too long delayed attack upon Grand Gulf by our naval flottilla commenced at 8 o'clock this morning, and seven of the gunboats—Benton, (flag ship,) Lafayette, Tuscumbia, Carondelet, Mound City, Pittsburgh and Louisville—under the impetuous gallantry of our boys, and the rebel General massed his forces on his left, from which, after a furnous struggle, in which a large number of regiments were engaged, he was forced to retire with great loss. Later, he massed his troops on his right, and by their skill disposition, aided by his intimate knowledge of the topography of this region, he compelled our boys to retire. Subsequently reinforcements were sent, and after a brilliant engagement, lasting for two hours, in which brigades from nearly every division of the army were more or ized by the capture and occupation of New a very appropriate speech to make the presentation. He said that as chairman of the delegtion it was his duty to present a control of the delegtion it was his duty to it to the General a copy of the joint present in the General and present and Common Outcuil of Washington, as an evidence of their appreciation of the distinguished services he rendered that city.—When, in 1861, the government summoned General McClellan to the defence of Washington, the army was in a completely discognaized condition, and the capital was in the utmost peril.
