2d The minority report by Mr. Baldwin, of Connections, in turns almost, stated it. The preamble of resolutions recommended by him said, "Whereas, unhap."

North constituted but a small portion of its people, possessing no power to be dreaded, and that public opinion there was sound, and desired to secure the South in all its rights, and protecting then obvious that neither the intellectual acuteness with which its author supported it, nor the influence of his previously well earned fame, nor the persuasive authority of the great names of Jefferson and Madison, could save it from almost universal condemnation of the purest, brightest and ablest minds of South Carolina herself.

One of these, James L. Pettigrew, but recently taken from us, to the deep regret of the nation, undismayed by the intense treason and frantic violence around him, safe from their danger by the shield of his spotless character, his stern courage and lofty patriotism, to the very last of his stay on earth, retained and boldly avowed his perfect loyalty to the governarowed his pertect loyalty to the govern the recommendation of the convention ment. Too wise to be led astray by the shallow fallacies of the Rhetts and Yan-would have been made. ceys of the hour, and too devoted to the happiness of his State and country, to take any other course, he clung to the faith of our fathers, and boldly dengunced the treason. to which these consistors

The doctrine therefore soon tell into general disrepute, and was finally, and to the gratification of the country, extinguish ed by the matchless power and eloquence of Webster, and the stern patriotism and cause, perhaps without being aware of it, of Webster, and the stern patriotism and indomitable will of Jackson. It was demonstrated by Mr. Madison, himself, whose mind remained as clear as sunlight, in several letters in 1831-2, to be utsterly untenable, and with no warrant either in the resolutions of '98-9, or in the report, they would not venture or rebellion. the resolutions of '98-9, or in the report, the work of his own pen, made in defense of those of Virginia. This heresy exploded, the other kindred and as gross and more pernicious one of secession was substituted. But this at first met with little favor. In fact it slept unbeeded. substituted. But this at thet with little favor. In fact it slept unheeded.

A portion, however; of its votaries de signed at the first opportunity to make it work exprising mischief, and for mischief only was it suited. The tariff no longer furnishing this opportunity, the plan was "to fire the Southern heart," and drive the Southern mind, to madness by slavery agitation. The institution was so goonnected with their domentic comfort sad so vital, as they thought, to their mandistanced standing and so clearly recognized and protected by the Constitution it self, and had not only been the cause of danger, but the source, as they believed, of their prosperity and political power, and shope all, its sudden termination to resist the effort exert its direct calamities, that capproach it with that end, was sure to produce the sternest determination to resist the effort at all heards, and to break, if it could not be otherwise successfully accomplished, even the ties of association, of fraternal and a fountain of national sentiment and a fountain of national representations and shower. The plotters on both sides and provided them that the foundation of national sentiment and a fountain of national representations of heard happy homebridge conditions and thousands of hefore happy to some the sent and a fountain of national representation.

to call in question the purposed accuracy of Mr. Field, but to set myself right with those who may feel an interest in the subject. For this purpose a few preliminary remarks are necessary. The Convention assembled, at the intente of Virginia, through resolutions passed by her General Assembly, on the 10th of January, 1801. Their presable sets orth as "the deliberate opinion" of that body, that "Mr. Guthrie, of Kentucky, and of "unless the unhappy controverey which as divided the States of the confederacy shall be satisfactorilly adjusted, a permantal assembled. He Tinon is tened to the Contentiable to state of the Contentiable to the Con North and South, who looked to such a stitution, or be justly maintained on result, not only without regret, but with hope and gladness. They were doubtless few in each section, but they were zealous, reckless and fanatical, and needed only, cessful. But I believed that the long plot to succeed, topics with which to delude the masses and madden the mind of the masses the honest masses, and in driving them on to succeed, topics with which to delude and madden the mind of the masses around them. These, all good, loyal men, were solicitious to deprive them of, and hence they were so anxious to place allowers, the chief cause of mischief, beyond their reach. That the danger existeu, not only manifested itself, in the manner before stated, but every proposition offered in the peace convention, whether by Northern or Southern delegates, disclosed it. South, and that to make the recommendation of the Convention effective, the prop-mended by him said, "Whereas, unhappy differences exist which have alienated from each other, portions of the people of the United States, to such an extent as seriously to disturb the peace of the nation."

The principle of legal nulification, asserted by Mr. Calboun, in 1828, in a carefully prepared paper which was made in the foundation of the nulifying ordinance of his State, of 1832, was maintained in part, if not mainly, on the authority of the Kentucky and Virginia resolutions of 1798-9. The folly of the doctrine, its utter inconsistency with the very words and objects of the Constitution, were so obvious that neither the intellectual acuteness with which its author supported it, the treason, to which these conspirators speaking it, resolved on an opposite invited, and by which they have, to their own ruin, led on their deluded tollow

The doctrine therefore soon fell into antees that the Southern members and They maintained therefore, throughout, their opposition to the proposed Guthrie guarantees, and were equally hostile to any that their Southern brethren over and over again offered; and in terms of earnest invocation implored them, adopting sternest determination to resist the citort at all heards, and to break, if it could not be otherwise successfully accomplished, even the ties of association, of fragger ternal affection and of love of country, which, until then, had been a universal national sentiment and a fountain of national sentiment and a fountain of national sentiment and a fountain of national power. The plotters on both sides, who had long wished and meditated a destruction of the Union for that purpose, eagerly caught at every chance to present and fan into flame this fruitful topic of mischtef. With that view those in the South greatly exaggerated the prevalence of Northern hoatility, whilst those in the North did all they could to aid them. Whether by arrangement or not, they were in fact the alines of each other. They worked for the same end, and by the same means—slavery agitation. It was a supplementation of the Long. Washington, May 10, 1853.

To the Editors of the Journal of Commerce:

I am obliged to you for the copy of Mr. David Dadley Field's letter to you, of the class in present of the succeeding day.

In the present condition of the copur try no advantagee perhaps can be gained by recalling "the history of the Peace Convention," but as Mr. F. has thought fit to would be faithfully observed in the states in regard to it is erroneous should be corrected.
