Crittenden, like all patriotic Democrats and Conservatives, goes for sustaining the Government, but will not give up his right to criticise the acts of the Administration :

"When usurpations of power are made dangerous, and when enerozehments upon my liberty and the liberty of my constituents and upon the Constitution intended to guard the liberties of us all, are made, I would have every man have spirit enough to dec are his opinions and offer his protests. Without this freedom of speech the can be no leating liberty; the Repub to cannot exist.

A people who cannot discuss the public measures of the nation, and apply the necessary rebuke 10 secure correction of wrongs, cannot be a free people, and do not deserve to be."

Ours was Slavery. hussia finds that Poland is hers. Surely Ireland, the Poland of the Seas, is the vulnerable point of haughty England. In the event of a war with Great Britain, even so small a force as 20,000 A merican soldiers, backed with a fleet of a dozen war-ships, and a few snucy Monitors, would win the independence of Ireland, in a three weeks' campaign. If we must fight, one day, this consummation is what England may look for as inevitable. We want peace with "all the world and the rest of markind," but if England resume her offensive speech and conduct, it is possible that we may be driven into war. There can be no doubt of the issue."

It seems that Mr. Crittenden, and commends them very after the battles of Saturday and Sunday, Mr. Crittenden, and commends them very highly. This is all right, but why does not our neighbor publish the whole speech? It is all good, and we feel quite sure would be far more acceptable to the done. When the council opened, Gen. Beynolds stretched himself on a camp bed, with a remark to the effect that he was going to take a nap, as the decision of course would be to move the army out of its intrenchments to fight Lee. And he bered. We insist upon the Gazette giving did go to sleep, to be astounded when he awoke with the news that Gen. Hooker had determined to recross the river. It will not do so we desire it to publish the tacking the enemy, who at that moment was moving to drive General Sedgwick's corps across the river. General Sickles alone proposed a retreat, and his councils prevailed against all the other corps com-manders. The only excuse for Hooker, is that he had discovered his utter inability to handle a large army, and moreover was, perhaps, laboring under a fit of de-pression, such as often occurs to people pression, such as often occurs to people whose appetites for stimulants are excessive. This report, which is undoubtedly true, is creating much comment here. I s rumored in connection with this matter. that General Sickles is to be detached from the army of the Potomac, and will

Mr. Seward as a Prophet. Blackwood is very amusing on Mr. Sew ard. A wicked writer strings together the following extract from his despatches:

"On February 19, 1862, he writes to Mr. Adams: 'I was just about instructing you how to answer the quernlous complaints in Parliament which you have anticipated, the chief of which is the assumed incompletency of government to suppress the insurrection. But avery shrewd observer, as a loyal, and at present, exiled Virginian, fell in at the moment, and expressed to me the opinion that the end of the war is in series of successes over a disheartened conspiracy, and then all will be over.'

What do we hope for? Not for peace more than revenge upon a worthess, heartless and crue-cnemy. We hope, and hope it earnestly to live long enough, it no longer, to see our cavalry trooping through every city, village, and hamlet of the Tankeez. To see their women begging protection as ours have pleaded with tearful eyes to fiends in Tankee uniforms to be protected from their brustal so diery. To see the ploughs form from the hands of their farmers and broken into pieces—their fences laid waste and their homes in dames—their vives and children driven homes in dames—their wives and children driven homes in dames—their lences laid waste and their bound to gether by thirty-three strong iron botts, flush in front, and braced up from the inside by nuts and screws; a washer of India rubber, half an inch thick, being on each bolt.
