AND Whereas, In fact and according to the well established, long descended and commendable habit in these United States of free discussion of political questions; what he uttered was neither in itself. livered the following address:

dignation of the people upon the arbitrary arrest, military trial and exile of the Hou.

Clement I. Vallaudigham, of Ohio.

As the Constitution of the United States ever power is offended, discussion is but Constitution established by them as the supreme authority.

If these transactions had occurred with in the limits of a rebel State, which had subverted the Constitution and laws of the Union, where the exercise of military power was a necessity, we could readily understand the force of the argument by cratic party a Governor and both houses of the Legislature; and whom we expect to bring in by such overwhelming majorities as may be reasonably reckoned on, when the question comes fairly up between liberty and the Constitution on the one side, and on the other ignominious oppression. nower was a necessity, we could readily sinderstand the force of the argument by which such arbitrary proceedings are exercised. But in a loyal State, where the courts are in full operation—where the interrupted Constitution and laws are entirely unob applause. Constitution and laws are entirely unobstructed, except by the authorized acts of men wearing our own uniform, the pretence of "military necessity" is an absurdity. Such an excuse, if valid, would equally sanction the violation of all other rights of the people. If the free citizens the acts of their own public servants, they may, on the same principle, be deprived of their undoubted right to change the Administration by the Constitutional exercise of the elective franchise. If the people are prepared to submit, without remonstrance, to the dangerous infraction of their rights, which we have just witnessed in the case of Mr. Vallandigham, the following admirable letter from Ex. Governor Hunt was read. It should be remembered that Gov. H. never belonged to the Democratic party; he was a leading member of their rights, which we have just witnessed in the case of Mr. Vallandigham, the following admirable letter from Ex. If the people are prepared to submit, without is remonstrance, to the dangerous infraction of their rights, which we have just with nessed in the case of Mr. Vallandisham, then the most glorious form of government which the world ever witnessed is already overturned.

I trust, however, that there is a redeeming spirit of patriotism and true loyalty in lawling apairit, of patriotism and true loyalty in lawling as printing in the people, and that in their suggestic and lawling lawling as the lollowing resolutions were read to our rights under the Constitution of the recent appleaus, the following resolutions were read by Chas. Buckwalter, Eagl who prehaded to the constant that we will not consent to be berreft of the solution in the manner of these rights in consequence of these rights in consequence of these rights in consequence of the solution in the commending them to every Democrat and lost none of these rights in consequence of the Southern rebellion.
