HEAVY ON BURNSIDE. Poor Burnside is being most cruelly cago; and among those who strike the national administration. The New York Evening Post talks right out, and administers some wholesome advice to both Burnside and President Lincoln. Alluding to the withdrawal of the edict against the Chicago Times, the Evening Post remarka:

"We hope that the mere withdrawal of the offensive military order has been accompanied by a secret intimation to the General that his daty is not to regulate the politics of his department, but to drive the rebels out of it with fire and sword daty is, not to regulate the politics of his depart ment, but to drive the rebels out of it with fire and sword

"We hope the President, therefore, will not content himself with a revocation of Burnside's order. He should cause it to be knewn that his administration means to adhere to the laws of the country and to the acknowledged principles of civil liberty. It has already suffered in the estimation of its frien's, and provoked the bitterest hostility of its ene nies, because of the mere suspicion it purposely overrides therights of he press. Nothing is so sacred in the eyes of the American citizen as his prerogative of approving or condemning the acts of his servants. Nothing ought to be dearer to those public servants themselves—for the only mode in which they can discover that they are rightfully performing the duties with which they are charged is through the expression of public opinion. A conscientious statesman is always eager to learn the sentiments

He and his party were held to a most rigid accountability for their conduct, by some of those who now claim immunity from all investigation. Among was munity from all investigation. Among those who did object to the conduct of President Polk upon the occasion referred to was Mr. Lincoln himself. In January 14th, 1848, he made a speech in the Honse of Representatives, from which we select the following paragraphs. He says

"Let him (President Polk) answer fully fairly, and candidly. Let him answer with Jaca, and candidly. Let him answer with Jaca, and to with arguments. Let him remember he site where Washington satt, and, so remembering.

As the nation should not, and the Almighty will not, be evaded, so let him attempt no evasion, no equivocation.

"But if he can not or will not do this—if, on any pretense, or on no pretense, he shall refuse or omit it—then I shall be fully convinced of what I more than suspect already, that he is deeply conscious of being in the wrong; that the blood of this war, like the blood of Able, is crying to Heaven against him; that he ordered Goneral Taylor into the midst of a peaceful Mexican settlement purposely to bring on a war; that originally, having some strong motive—what, I will not stop now to give my opinions concerning—to involve the two countries in a war, and trusting to escapescratiny by fixing the public gaze upon the exceeding brightness of military glory—that attractive rainbow that rises in showers of blood—that charms to destroy—he plunged into it, and has swept on and on, till disappointed in his calculation of the ease with which Mexico might be subdued; he now finds himself he knows not where. How like the haif means mumbling of a rever dream is the whole war part of the late message!

"All this shows that the President is in no wise satisfied with his own positions. First, he takes up one, end, in attempting to argue us into it, he argues himself out of it, then seizes another, and goes through the same; and then, confused at being able to think of nothing new, he snatches up the of ree again, which he had some time before cast off. His mind, tasked beyond its power, is running hither and thither, like some tortured creature on a burning surface, finding appartion on which it can set the down and be at case." Again, it is a singular omi sion in this message that it nowhere intimates when the President expe is this war to terminate. At its beginning Gen. Scott was, by the President, the President favor, if not disgrace, for intimating that peace could not be conquered in less than three or four months. But now, at the end of about twenty months—during which our arms have given us most splendid successes—every department and every part, land and water, officers and privates, regulars and volunteers, doing all that men could do, and hundreds of things which it had ever before been thought that men could not do—after a l this, this same President gives us a long message, without showing us that, as to the end he has himself even an imaginary conception. As I before said, he knows not where he is. He is a bewildered, confounded, and miseraby perplaxed man. God grant he may be able to show there is not something about his conscience more painful than all his mental perplexity."

First and Second Classes. The conscription bill divides citizens liable to draft into two classes. One com-prises all the able hodied men between the ages of 20 and 35, married or unmarried, and all unmarried men between the ages of 35 and 45. The second class in cludes all married men between the last Atlantic Blockading Squadron, is now at is nearly as four to one.
