The flow of gas and water was strong and incessant. An inch and a quarter tube was let down the well one day last week, with a "ased bag" attached to the lower end of the pipe, and after it had reached a depth of over three hpndred feet the flow of water was partially stopped and gas accompanied with a small quantity of oil was discharged. Presently the seed bag burst and water again ported from the well. The tube was vithdrawn and replaced with another seed bag, the latter having been let down 400 feet below the supply and stopping the flow of water. Since then the wall has been blowing gas, with a strong pressure, to the full capacity of the tube. If oil does not follow this discharge of gas, it is the intention of the operators to withdraw the tube and drill 50 feet deeper, which, they think, will tap the oil to a certainty,
