Death of John Irwin, Sr. Oar columns are charged this evening with the announcement of the death of an-other of Pittsburgh's representative men. Mr. John Irwin, br., is known through-out Western Pennsylvania as one of our oldest, most substantial and influential cit-izens. He was one of the earliess native born denizens of this locality : has a large born denizens of this locality; has always maintained a high position among its most active and energetic business men, and preserved an enviable reputation for high worth in all the spheres of lite in which he was called to act. His individual lite, dating in jie origin with the for lite, dating in its origin with that of the "settlement where he was born, was ever a living influence in the tide, that, amid a living influence in the tide, that, amid all the vicissitudes through which it has passed, has resulted in making Pittsburgh what it is. Mr. Irwin has been for a large portion of his life successfully en-gaged in the manufacture of ropes, twine, cordage, &c.
