In the face of the notorious fact of our country being happy and prosperous since the organization of the Government, up until the accession of Abolitionism to power, Brough tells us that the war must be conducted for the utter destruction of slavery, before we can have a lasting speace. His conception of the contest between the sections is about as shallow as his handwaleys of Othello and Desdemonia. That estimable lady did not betray any one, that pulled lago made Othello believe that she did. How Gen. Lee Proposes to Iso late Washhington and Balmore.

FFFECTS OF THE ISOLATION.

Correspondence of the Chicago Times Washington, June 26. As the plans of Gen. Lee in his invasion of the North become developed day by day, it is impossible not to admire the military skill and foresight with which all was nt suppressed by Burnside, has, at his movements are conducted; and, at the Washington a singularly careful and shrewd same time, no one can fail to execrate the imbecility and culpability of Hooker in have been remarkably correct in nearly permitting the rebel General to advance thus unmolested and at his leisure, from we trust that events may prove him to be Culpepper to Warrenton, from Warrenton much mistaken in his predictions in rela- to Winchester, from Winchester to Williamsport on the Upper Potomac, from lation to the rebel Lee, which we copy in the Potomac into Maryland, from Maryland into Pennsylvanis, and from Chambersburg towards the Susquehanna river. Every intelligent man must stand amazed at the apathy, or stupidity, or blundering conduct, on the part of Hooker, which has planet," to oppose not the slightest obsta. cle to the progress of Gen. Lee's army during the movements of the latter for the last three weeks, and this, too, when it causes of Hooker's retirement, but such is not the fact. The Dispatch of this city, informs us that:

"Since the remark of McClel'an no pains have ing of the Rappahannock by Gen. Lee's been spared by the Copperhead leader and the opposition press to discredit the abilities of the men by whom he was succeeded, and their labors have not been without fruit."

army; a movement which was executed about the 13th or 14th inst. Instead of doing this, on the 14th inst. Hooker commenced his retreat from Falmouth towards ericksburg under Burnaide, and utterly tinsburg on the 16th. Yet of the fact and ericksburg under Burnaide, and utterly tinsourg on the 10th. and, like the Moor, he may, after being overwhelmingly defeated for Governor of Ohio, in a fift of remorse do away with himself.

Frederick City, is only 60 miles—an easy three days' march. Starting on the 18th Hooker could have had his whole army massed on the left bank of, the Potomac by the 20th, certainly by the 22d. And Gen, Lee could never, have crossed the Strimehers to dislodge them, and after a brief but spirited context they succeeded in driving them out, when the rebels ran, the same distance are deployed as strimehers to dislodge them, and after a brief but spirited context they succeeded in driving them out, when the rebels ran. There was considerable artillery firing on our side, to which the rebels replied with some halfs adozen shells. We had quite a same shell adozen shells. We had quite 22d inst. On the 23d he crossed the Potomac at three fords, without the least opposition, and on the 24th his whole army was in Maryland. The news of to day is that his columns were moving northward yesterday, towards Chambersburg, in Pennsylvania, with the apparent intention of advancing to Harrisburgh. But you may rely upon it, that is not the destination of the rebel army at present. The grand proportions of the plan of the rebel perhaps by bands of guerrillas, while his main army perhaps will advance no turther north than Chambersburg, and no further east than York. But, the destruction of these railroads being once accomplished, where will both Washington and Baltimore be? They will be but ripe pears, which will fall into the hands of the rebel General whenever he advances against them. For what will Hooker's army be, against the convention for the second of the second against the superior forces of Gen. Lee, augmented by all the reinforcements, too, that the Confederate government will send to his aid? For, while our railroad com munication will be served, those of the rebels will be in full operation; and troops in any desired numbers will be sent from all parts of the South to Richmond, from Richmond to Culpepper, and from Cul-peper over the route taken by Gen. Lee. Such are the fruits of the retention in command of Gen. Hooker. Such are the fruits of the war as managed by Mr. Lin-
