SATURDAY MORNING, JULY 25, 1863. Established 1842.

TO MY WIFE.

BY JOS. BRENNAN.

[The following, by a young Irish exile, who died some years ago, a journalist, in New Orleans, is singular for its tender identity, simple expression and exquisite terror. In its way we do not know its equal. Emman wrote few poems but was a true poet. What he has written should be collected and published. He is now known only by these lines to his wife, and the affectionate verses which the unfortunate Irish poet, Clarence Mangen, addressed him. Mangan speaks of him as being "endowed with all Shelley's soul:"]

Come to me, dearest, I'm lonely without thee;
Day time and night time I'm thinking about thee;
Night time and day time in dreams I behold thee—
Unwelcome the waking that leaves to fold thee.

Come to me, darling, my morrow by lighten;
Come in thy beauty, to bless and to brighten;
Come in thy womanhood, weakly and lowly:
Come in thy lovingness, queenly and holy.

Swallows will flit round the desolate ruin,
Telling of Spring and its joyous renewing;
And thoughts of thy love and its manifold treasure
Are circling my heart with a promise of pleasure.

Oh, Spring of my spirit! oh, May of my bosom!
Shine out on my soul till it bourgeon and blossom.
The past of my life has a rose root within it,
And thy fondness a one to the sunshine can win it.

Features lit up by a reflex of Heaven—
Eyes like the skies of poor Erin, our mother,
Where shadow and sunshine are chasing each other.

Smiles coming seldom, but child like and simple,
Openi g their eyes from the heart of a dimple;
Oh, thanks to the Saviour! that even thy seeming
Is left to the exile to brighten his dreaming.

You have been glad when you knew I was gladdened;
Dear, are you sad now to hear I am saddened?
Our hearts ever answer in tune and in time, love,
As octave to octave, and rhyme unto rhyme, love.

I cannot weep, but your tears will be flowing:
You cannot smile, but my cheeks will be glowing:
I would not die without you at my side, love:
You will not linger when I shall have died, love.

Come to me, dear, ere I die of my sorrow—
Rise on my gloom like the sun of to-morrow—
Strong, swift and fond as the words which I speak, love,
With a song on your lips and a smile on your cheeks, love.

Come, for my heart in your absence is weary:
Haste, for my spirit is sickened and dreary:
Come to the heart that is throbbing to press thee:
Come to the arms that would fondly caress thee.

CRESSON SPRINGS.

THIS DELIGHTFUL SUMMER RESORT, immediately on the line of the Central P. R. R., located on the Summit of the Allegheny Mountains, 2,300 feet above the level of the sea, will be open for the reception of visitors on the 20th of June, 1863, and will be kept open until the first of October.

The water and air at this point possess superior attractions. The mineral water, made by the laboratory of Professors Booth, Garrett, and Cassaac, of Philadelphia, show the existence of valuable mineral elements, the waters of some of the springs being of the iron or chalybeate class, and Pure mountain water abounds; and the guests will also be supplied with mineral waters from other springs, such as Blue Lick, Bedford and Saratoga Waters.

Ample facilities for bathing have been provided, new plunge and douch baths erected, and Hot and Cold Baths can at all times be obtained.

The grounds, walks, &c., have been highly improved, and are of a varied and picturesque character.

There is at Cresson Springs, a Telegraph Office and two daily mails from Philadelphia and Pittsburgh, and intermediate points.

An Excellent Letter From Judge Thurman, of Ohio.

Judge Thurman has written a very excellent letter to his Democratic friends in Marion county. He says:

The Democratic party is struggling, against fearful odds to maintain and perpetuate the dearest rights that ever belonged to a people—the right of self government, of constitutional liberty, of personal safety, of inviolate homes and property, of free thought, free speech, and a free press. All that the term "Constitutional freedom" imports, is at stake in this contest. After nearly a century of undisputed sway, Liberty is suddenly called upon to vindicate her claim to the respect and allegiance of the American people. It seems almost too strange to be true; yet the fact is undeniably so. The most solemn guaranties of the Constitution are treated with contempt by the men in power, and a host of their followers, who are, unwittingly, binding upon their own, as well as our limbs, the fetters of despotism. If the doctrines promulgated in high places—and not only promulgated, but carried into effect—shall receive the sanction of the people, we may bid a long farewell to those free institutions that have hitherto been the chief source of our happiness, and which, but lately, were our highest pride and boast. I do not, however, despair of the result. We may have a protracted struggle before civil liberty shall be secure from danger, but in the end that security will be attained. Who ever thinks that the American people will long submit to despotic government, knows but little of their character or history, or is incapable of profiting by what he does know.

But it will not be without effort that our rights will be preserved. It is a law of nature that the more valuable a thing is, the more toil is requisite to acquire and preserve it; and hence, there never was a truer saying than the trite old maxim, "Eternal Vigilance is the Price of Liberty." It is not vigilance one day and supineness the next; it is not vigilance in time of peace and indifference in time of war; but it is unceasing vigilance, vigilance at all times and under all circumstances, that is required of freemen who would continue to be free. It is to the consciousness of this truth that we owe that mighty protest against arbitrary power, which now comes gushing from so many million American hearts, and whose magnificent proportions each successive day serves but to increase. It is the cry of liberty wounded in her most cherished homes; it is the spirit of the fathers calling upon their sons to deserve, and deserving, to defend and protect the dearest birthright ever inherited by man. It is the mission of the Democratic party to perform this service for mankind, and perform it it will.

Yours truly,
A. G. THURMAN.

T. H. HODDER, Chairman Dem. Central Com., Marion, Ohio.

On the Potomac.

From the World's correspondent.

HARPER'S FERRY, July 17.

Of all miserable-looking places in the world it would be hard to point out one more woe-begone than a garrison town more than half in ruins on a dank and comfortless long summer day. In the middle of July the sun ought to be shining and the air kindly and genial. But the rain, though not violent, has been so nearly incessant that a cold, damp feeling pervades everything; the mud is deep and the rivers angry and swollen, while even the canal, so low yesterday, is now, in this lower pond at least, almost up to its banks. There are quite a number of rows of soldiers' tents run up since yesterday on the heights just above the telegraph office, where I have awaited a message from my colleague, which has not come. I had ample leisure to contemplate the discomfort of the soldiers in their elevated position, with nothing over their heads that was not soaked through and through, and the wet ground for their only resting place—poor children of the mist, to borrow a term from the great military tale of Sir Walter. The cloudy nightcap rested but a short distance above their heads, as it came down, visibly down a good way below the summit, and their tents were about half way up. On the Virginia heights the mists lay both lower and thicker, as though there was an influence even in the very atmosphere of rebeldom to cloud the vision and depress the spirit. On the shelf of muddy ground divided between the streets of Sandy Hook and the railroad the soldiers moved listlessly about, in the varied phases of men not knowing exactly what to do with themselves. Those who were lucky enough not to have thrown away their good blue great coats had all got them on, and they presented a picture of comparative comfort. But they were the exceptions rather than the rule.

It is announced that Admiral Porter is to have command of all the naval forces in the Mississippi River. He will have nothing to do but keep down the guerrillas and prevent any rebel squads from planting batteries to interrupt the navigation of the river. Admiral Farragut will be detached with all vessels in this river that are fit for active service to give his attention to—Mobile! The fall of Vicksburg and Port Hudson releases Farragut's fleet and when he proceeds to business, something will be done that will add to the fame of our glorious navy. Mobile has recently become a favorite resort for blockade-runners, and must receive some attention.

The War Powers of the Constitution.

There is much reason to apprehend that those who are ready to sanction any and every resort by injudicious Generals to "extraordinary powers," because, as they say, we are living in "war times," and that the regular modes of proceeding are not adequate to the exigency, have really failed to understand how truly the Constitution provides for a time of war. A Republican contemporary, the Buffalo Commercial Advertiser, in replying to those who would deny the existence of the belligerent prerogatives conferred by that instrument on Congress, and the President, says:

"Our Constitution, like the people for whom it was made, is, it is true, adapted to a state of peace. Our fathers—its founders—expected and intended that this would be pre-eminently a peaceful nation; and accordingly they made full and fair provisions for this national condition.—But they also knew full well, not only by reason and by the example of all national history, but also by their own blood-bought experience, that ability in war is a condition precedent to national peace: and accordingly they embodied in the Constitution and in the Government thereby created the most perfect and effective war power that any nation ever possessed.

"It was not necessary, nor even proper to insert in that great instrument a complete war code. They who prepared and composed it had too much soundness of judgment to attempt to do so. Their large-mindedness would not permit them to disfigure their great work, as some politicians would perhaps now do, with petty details. But they did insert abundant and plain provisions for the exercise by this nation of all the functions and powers of war allowable to any nation. We quote some of its provisions to show how plainly this is a war constitution:

"That Congress shall have power to define and punish piracies and felonies committed on the high seas, and offences against the law of nations; to declare war, grant letters of marque and reprisal, and make rules concerning captures on land and water; to raise and support armies; to provide and maintain a navy; to make rules for the government and regulation of the land and naval forces; to provide for calling forth the militia to execute the laws of the Union, suppress insurrections and repel invasions; to provide for organizing, arming and disciplining the militia, and for governing such part of them as may be employed in the service of the United States.

The Executive power shall be vested in a President of the United States of America. He shall take the following oath or affirmation: 'I do solemnly swear (or affirm) that I will faithfully execute the office of President of the United States, and will, to the best of my ability, preserve, protect, and defend the Constitution of the United States.' The President shall be Commander in Chief of the Army and Navy of the United States and of the militia of the several States when called into the actual service of the United States. He shall take care that the laws be faithfully executed.'

"It is impossible to allow force to these provisions, to attach to the words used their plain, simple and obvious signification, and yet deny to this nation and to its executive agent all the war power which can rightfully be ever exercised by any nation on earth. This power is not abrogated by the peace provisions contained in the same instrument. Both stand and are to be interpreted together."

The Turning Point.

General Scott predicted, in the commencement of the rebellion, that the "decisive battles" of the war would be fought in the Mississippi Valley, and these battles, he thought, would be about eight in number. General Scott's prediction has been commonly understood as relating to the opening of the Mississippi river; let us see how nearly it has been fulfilled.

The great battles fought in opening the Mississippi were:

1. Fort Henry. 2. Fort Donelson. 3. New Orleans. 4. Island Ten. 5. Shiloh. 6. Memphis. 7. Sherman's 8. Port Gibson. 9. Jackson. 10. Champion Hills. 11. Black River. 12. Grant's Vicksburg. 13. Port Hudson.

General Scott's prophecy made no allowance for defeats, and allowed but a single battle for each important strategic point. Thus, if we reduce all the battles fought to the reduction of Vicksburg into one, the prophecy will be fulfilled exactly. This however, cannot properly be done. The brilliant series of battles fought by Gen. Grant in moving his army to the rear of Nicksburg, were not mere skirmishes, but among the severest engagements of the war. They were, however, integral parts of a single grand design—incidents of a campaign which will stand forth in history as one of the grandest in conception and most brilliant in execution of any which the records of human warfare can show.

General Scott's prediction was probably based upon his knowledge of the military geography and topography of the Mississippi valley. Immediately on the shores of the river, there are, between Cairo and New Orleans, only eight points susceptible of being converted into military "strong holds," as against an enemy descending the river. These points, singularly enough, are all on the south side of the stream. They are—Columbus, Island Ten, "Fort Pillow," Randolph, Vicksburg, Grand Gulf, Natchez, Port Hudson. There are many other points which in low water could be easily and strongly fortified, but which could not be occupied in high water. Memphis can be made very strong against an enemy coming up the river, but not against one coming down. Natchez is much the same. The points which nature has made the strongest, are Columbus, Fort Pillow, Vicksburg and Grand Gulf. Every one of these is a natural Sebastopol. On the west side of the river, New Madrid, Helena, Napoleon and perhaps one or two other points, are susceptible of fortification, but none of them is of much military strength or importance.

General Scott, we suppose, anticipated "about eight" battles in the reduction of the eight natural "strong holds" by which the rebels held possession of the Mississippi. It was not these eight particular battles which he thought would be decisive, but it was the re-possession of the river by the national arms which, in his opinion, would be the turning point of the war. That great national artery once wrested from their grasp, the military situation would be such that the rebels must inevitably be beaten. In this opinion all intelligent military men must concur. The turning point of the war has been reached.

I AM NOW PREPARED TO FURNISH drafted men with substitutes. Any number of substitutes applying will be taken. KEY NOAN, Fourth street, one door above Smithfield. jy18:1w*

PITTSBURGH OIL TRADE.

Saturday, July 25th, 1863.

Business dur ng the past two days was active and amount of Oil changed hands. Holders were firm in their views and full rates were obtained. Our latest report from New York note a firm market for Crude, at 39c; the rates of course include the packages. These prices are lower than our own rates when the cost of transportation is taken into consideration. The amount to come out the present rise has been variously estimated.—The number of barrels cannot be ascertained correctly at present. The receipts per the Allegheny river were, Crude 3,224 barrels. Refined—18 bb's per A. V. R. R. Refined 10.61 bb's. Crude 435 bbls per C. & P. R. R Refined—148 bbls Exports per P. F. W. & C. R. R. Crude—295; Refined 1178 bb's. The market for Crude being active. Among the sales we note as follows, viz: 150 bbls packages included 29c102, do 29c58. do 26c1 70 do 26c12c bb's, no choice 25; 140 do 26¾; 100 bbls 26c94 do 26c. Other small lots were disposed of at the same range of prices of prices—Sales the receipts to be returned, 200 bbls. at 29 to 29½; 120 do 29½c21. Refined—The market during the week was dull, dealers seem to be dovetail their who's time to Crude as that this article suffered considerable neglect. The sales of Refined were quite small at 46c45. Free—64c55; buyers generally were asking lower figures The Benzoline dull, there being no demand. Prices were nominal.

Lubrication—The market was heavy prices in a small way averaging from $7 21c900 as per quality.

PITTSBURGH PRODUCE MARKET.

OFFICE OF THE DAILY POST,
Saturday, July 25, 1863.

Remarks—The weather was changeable with occasional showers of rain. We have the pleasure of announcing a slight raise of water in the Allegheny. The marks on the Allegheny piers showing six feet, whilst in the Monongahela there were five feet eight inches. This rise will enable some of our steamers that have been detained on the way to make their way to this city. It will also enable those of our new boats that are ready to leave for the lower portions. The tow boat Fox with three barges, drawing 3½ feet water carrying 24,000 bush coal, was expected to get out last night or early to-day. This will be good news to parties below. The amount of coal to go out the first Monongahela rise is quite large. It will probably exceed two million bush. Business yesterday exhibited a slight improvement—a fair amount of the leading articles changed hands.

Hay—The receipts during the past two days were large, in consequence of which price have declined fully $5 a ton. We note sales of new at the scales at $ 26@28; old $22@30.

Feed—The demand has fallen off, prices lower Sales Bran at $1 20; Shorts 1 25 and middlings at 1 35 per cwt.

Hides—Sales 125 green salted at 10c per lb.

Cheese—Sales 130 boxes new W R at 10@10½c

Flour—We have the old story to report; that is a dull market with more sellers than buyers. It seems difficult for holders to realize at the present time, there being no demand outside the local trade, all the sales that come under our notice being 'ots of 25, 50 and 100 bbls from store. Sales 200 bbls Extra Family, 6 20@6 40; 150 do, terms withheld, 100 do favorite brand, 6 50

Bacon—Holders generally are asking higher figures, especially for shoulders. The sales were 2c@5c sugar-cured hams, 1,000 lbs, 12@12½; sides 2,500 lbs at 9½@9c.

Dried Fruit—The market was inactive. Sales being limited. Peaches range from $2 50@2 75; Apples, from $1 10@1 25.

New Bedford Oil Market.

For the week ending July 20.—From the N. B. Whaleman's Shipping List.—The market since our last has been quiet, though holders are firm, the trade and jobbers sales of 870 bbls sperm at $1 60, and 500 bbls whale at 90c over cargo. The imports of sperm and whale oil and whale bone into the United States during the week have been 3,623 bbls sperm oil, 2,432 whale do, 176 lbs whalebone. The total imports from Jan. 1st to date have been 49,756 bbls of sperm, 40,500 do whale and 315,250 lbs whalebone.

PROVISION MARKET.

Cincinnati.

In the Provision market there is no new feature. Old mess pork, city packed, would find buyers at $9 50 but it is held higher. No inquiry for new pork for lard. A good demand for shoulders and hams at our last quotations. Hams are exceedingly scarce and meet with a steady demand in all conditions—that is, either smoked or unsmoked. No demand for lard nor for bacon sides.

Imports of New York.

The imports of foreign merchandise, including Dry Goods) amounted to $2,259,481, against $3,430,681 in 1862, and $2,410,241 in 1861. The exports of specie last week were $1,180,781. The entire evidence of fear concerning the riots. The amount exported this year $3,180,781. The amount since Jan. 1 is $36,647,228 against $31,467,850 last year, 3,254,970 in 1861. The exports of specie so far are less than they were during the corresponding time in the years 1862, 1860, 1859, and 1857.
