The Negro at Home. M. Jules Gerard, the celebrated lior hunter, has written a letter to the Duke of Wellington, stating that he has "just" its defences are supplied. Major Morand twenty and twenty supplied to Europein 1755 and 1856 gives some than interesting its major mand twenty supplied to Europein 1755 and 1856 gives some Hamilicar Wellington, stating that he has "just" of Dahomey was staying for the celebration of the lesser ceremonies. The letter, however, is without date. On the day of his departure the King invited him to a review of his army prepared for war.

It comprised twelve thousand Amazons, it comprised twelve thousand Amazons, it is comprised twelve thousand in the celebration of the siege of Sabas. one thousand men of the body guard, and two thousand archers. After a preface, in which he describes the King as being like other blacks of his country, "tall, well built, a head like a bull dog, while the usual expression of his countenance is that nal expression of his countenance is that of cunning and cruelty, and his moral qualities are in keeping." M. Gerard thus describes the "lesser ceremony," of which he was a witness: On the day of my presentation. I was conducted across the market place; where twelve corpses were market place; where twelve corpses were exposed to view on separate sites. Six men were hung up by the feet, the six others were upright like men about to walk. ers were upright like men about to walk.

Those whom I saw close were horribly mutilated and not beheaded. An enormous pool of blood covered the ground beneath the scaffold, giving unmistakable evidence of previous sacrifices and of the tortures which accompanied them. Our reception by the King was brilliant, very cordial for myself as well as for the French Consul; but we were soon able to convince ourselves that this was but a comedy always performed by this poor Paladin to get the presents brought by the whites.

Born and brought up in the midst of these spectacles, which should be ridiculous if Born and brought up in the midst of these spectacles, which should be ridiculous if they were not horrible, the present King is actually more fond of them than his corresponding to our 32 s.) and the should be ridiculous if the corresponding to our 32 s.) and the should be ridiculous for the corresponding to our 32 s.) and the should be ridiculous that the should be ridiculous to the should be ridiculous. I saw him on that day admiring with the delight of a child the grotesque dances and ridiculous pantomime of his ministers, and then of the princes, and then of all present, for our amusement.

A most internal music, which nearly dearened us, delighted the King, who ascemed to be in a state of ectacy; and this lasted for six hours, on the following day his majesty invited as to witness a process.
