Reminiscences of Lord Clyde.
HIS EARLY LIFE AND LAST ILLNESS.

The English papers furnish many interesting reminiscences of the late Field-Marshal Lord Clyde, (Sir Colin Campbell) whose career has filled so large a space in the last fifty years of English history.

HIS PERSONAL APPEARANCE.
In person Lord Clyde was well built, symmetrical and graceful; but of late years his shoulders became somewhat bowed, though he lost little of the activity which was so remarkable in an old man.

To the last his teeth remained full and firm in the great square jaws, and his eyes pierced the distance with all the force of his youthful vision. His crisp, grey locks still stood upright, and thick, curling over the head and about the wrinkled forehead, and there were few external signs of the decay of nature which was, no many would have thought, accelerated by an exacting career. When he was all over, he threw into his manner and speech a simplicity and vivacity as fascinating as those whom it was exerted, and his wit was polished, gallant and the conversation of the other would be quite as effervescent as that of a young man.

A Soldier's Letter about "The Soldier's Friend"—Voters, Read!
The following letter from one of our brave Pennsylvania boys in the Army of the Potomac shows the feeling among our volunteers about Curtin's claim to be called "the soldier's friend."

"The writer of this letter served through all the fearful campaigns shared in every battle of importance since the late Frederick's, which he will carry to his grave. He is, nevertheless, without the Abolition traitors, who are too cowardly to turn out, call a 'Copperhead,' and is imperiling his life on the plains of Virginia under the flag of his country, while these parricides which arm has helped to keep secure, are roving about the shore of homes which belong to 'disloyal.' We give his letter, which is addressed to his mother, verbatim:

"My dear Mother—I received John's letter last week and I glad to hear that you are all well. I have no reason to complain, although the damp weather and rebel bullet in the leg have made me feel a little unwell. Tell John that I am a doctor like him. Tell John that I am a doctor like him. Tell John that I am a doctor like him.

"I have for thirty years been a doctor and I can cure any disease that is not incurable. I can cure any disease that is not incurable. I can cure any disease that is not incurable.

"I have for thirty years been a doctor and I can cure any disease that is not incurable. I can cure any disease that is not incurable. I can cure any disease that is not incurable.

"I have for thirty years been a doctor and I can cure any disease that is not incurable. I can cure any disease that is not incurable. I can cure any disease that is not incurable.

"I have for thirty years been a doctor and I can cure any disease that is not incurable. I can cure any disease that is not incurable. I can cure any disease that is not incurable.

"I have for thirty years been a doctor and I can cure any disease that is not incurable. I can cure any disease that is not incurable. I can cure any disease that is not incurable.
