atoly came, and the glad tidings were imparted to the young wife. She arose from her bed, arrayed herself as usual, and was rapidly regaining her health and cheerfulness when the counter roport came—the terrible confirmation that the Bainbridge was really lost with all her crew. Again was really lost with all her crew. Again she was prostrated, took to her bed, and refused to be comforted. Her friends despair of her recovery, and she will proba-bly die a victim to her affection for him whose love to her was more than life.—N. Y. Commercial A Humorous Incident on the Ken-tucky Central Bailroad.

On yesterday a humorous mistake occurred on the passenger train of the Kentucky Central railroad. In the fourth seat back of the stove, in one of the passenger cars, sat a gentleman and lady, sweet and gushing as the fairy ones of olden times. His arm encircled her waist in bear-like equeezing; his one hand toyed with her ribs; his other hand wandered around her amplitudes and bonnet strings like a lost child in a berry patch, seeking a place to rest, and his eyes were fixed on the face of his fair companion with all the earnestness of a Romeo, In short, they were the observed of all observers. In the first seat back of the couple alinded to sat a demurely looking lady, naturally interested in the display of affection in front of her, so natural and touching. gers. The poor remove nating one one sear too far back, had seated himself in the wrong seat, and was trying his best to kiss the demure lady, who couldn't see it! He lit out in a hurry, and with the most heepish look we ever saw, took his place beside the girl, while the spectators were convulsed with laughter.—Cin. Enquirer, Remarkable Longevity. We are indebted to a friend at Miller's Landing, Mo., for the following statement
