into the system of national banking in enden itiated by the present Secretary of the Pressury, in its prospective effects upon the currency of our nation and the nationl credu;; and to report what action, if any, devolves upon the banks of this association in the premises.

Remarks of James Gallatin, Esq., in Reference to the Above Resolution new banks. Questions of serious importance, to which your attention was solicited two years ago, have lately been brought to your notice in a circular dated 23.1 ult., signed "A Baak Stockholder and D rector." It is sourceded in this cir cular, that the "flood" of paper mon D rector. ey issued by the Secretary of the lreasury was whelly uncalled for, and that the refaral to adopt the sugges-tions of back officers and others as to the expediency of maintaining specie pay ments throughout the war has led to the evils which were then foreshadowed and which are now coming upon us in such frightful shapes, that even those who de rided the idea of sustaining specie pay ments stand aghast at the creation o their own policy. Thanks to the diaster-which have overwhelmed the paper issues of the insurgent Davis in rule, all loya-men can now see whither Mr. Chase's paper movey schemes are tending. No man can now doubt the folly and the mul Less of these schemes, nor question the racticability of conducting my conceiv ble amount of financial business in this country upon a specie basis; for, as we I know by all past experience in the Clearing House, the quantity of real money required to be moved does not amount wentisch part (live cents on the dol ar) of the sam of the business transacted I've Secretary's plans are defended on he ground that they have saved to the ousiery the interest on his issues of paper money, but the increased prices of sup dies are enhancing the cost of the war, and increasing our national debt to a much greater extent than the saving of this in terest; and as the proposed further is outs by the new banks can only aggravate he evil, without saving to the govern nent the interest on the proposed increase a circulation, it becomes the duty of bankers, as well as the people, to look ear: sily, as patriots, at the consequences

the extension of this new description f paper money. Does the country need it? Will it save the government from iu creased expenditure? Will it save in terest to the government? Will it bring rational banks of the places in which they made as avarer a specie standard? All these austions, in my humble judgment, de
