The Union as It Was. The Constitution as It Is.

THE SOLDIERS' VOTE When it was first announced, last spring, that the Administration at Washington intended sending home Abolition soldiers sufficient to control the New England elections, it was indignantly, vehemently and impudently denied by all the leaders engaged in it. The result of the elections in Connecticut and New Hampshire, however, demonstrated the truth of the accusation. More than this, a young and gallant officer in a New Hampshire regiment, Lieut. ETHERIDGE, was dismissed the service, by direct order from the War Department, for having simply and quietly voted the Democratic ticket. See now how matters have changed since the New England elections, alluded to. What was then denied by the Abolition leaders as a slander, is now regarded with peculiar favor; to deplete the Army of the Potomac by sending thousands of its members home for fifteen or twenty days to elect the Administration candidates, is not only looked upon as being commendable, but it has grown obligatory, in order that officers in the service may stand fair with the Administration. The path to military preforment, is the profession of Abolitionism. and the most of the officers in the service seem to understand it. The decapitation of young Etheridge served as an admonition, that the right of suffrage among paroled soldiers was confined exclusively to those who yould the Abolition ticke When Gov. CCRTIN, but a month ago, annonneed on the Allegheny Common that he intended bringing home as many soldiers from the service as he could to vote for him, the Abolition papers said that he meant only the invalids; but the day of the election showed that among the hundreds of soldiers who lined our streets, not one disabled appeared in every ten. The same thing has been practiced in the State of New York, The Herald, of Monday, said: "We understood that by election day (yesterday) there will be scattered about in the various counties of this State, where they belong, some eighteen thousand invalid soldiers from the army." I continues this bit of sarcasm, " These soldiers, we hope, will thus esjoy a pleasant trip home, and that after the election the most of them will be so wonderfully benefited by it as to be ready to return at once for active duty." If the New York invalids pursue the course of our Pennsylvania sufferers, they will not be in a hurry in returning to the service. Here they, until a few days ago, occupied the most prominent places at our public amusements, while their regular departures and returns from and to their different locations, showed that they were not indifferent to what was passing in neighboring restsurants. For invalids, these gallant fellows retained an amount of phisique, which was both astonishing and gratifying, assuring their numerous adies this to be explained? Why was Bishop ger of their early dissolution, It. vigor, in charging upon the rebels, that they did in assailing the choicest slices fur nished by our caterers to gentlemen of sound appetites, they will, each be enti tled to a coparate page in the history of the rebellion. Their returning as invalids now to elect State officers, will be followed next year by their electing electors. We should like to know, under these circumstances, what chance there is for supplanting those in power? If an army of a million of man in arms are to be used to slaveholders, as of all other men, under opposed the position of a member f the carry elections, and that too by those who the Constitution, shall be protected. And are already in power, wielding the over whelming resources of the Government,

If the people do not, after twelve months more experience, have virtue enough to rise and overwhelm this oppression, we same moment, and by making an anwar may conclude that our system of Government is a lamentable failure. The sooner, then, we adopt the form as well as the substance of a despotism, the better it will be for all concerned.

freshing and innocent humor, that it was Bishop Hopkins and not Bishop POTTER who was meant in my article about "political preaching." I would assure the Dispatch that it is entirely mistaken. alluded to Bishop Potter and his election eering protest, and to him only. Bishop Hopkins is amply able to take care o himself in every case—and he has done so in this instance with acknowledged force and effect. But alas! for Bishop POTTER, his partizan manifesto and its misguided signers! alas! that a Bishop, once uni versally respected and beloved, should cease to preach neace to those under his charge, and should become the willing in strument of a cunning clique of politi cians, to scatter fire brands broadcast ove the field of his labors!

The poor apology that Bishop HOPEIN provoked this unfortunate "protest" can not be truly made by Bishop Potter and his obsequious followers. The Bible View of Slavery" in a more extended form had been before the public for years previous to the elections of 1863. Du ing all those years, no Bishop, no body of clergymen of the Episcopal Church (as far as I can learn) had been so offended by it that they felt it to be their duty to combine, denounce or "protest" against . Bishop Potter and Bishop Hopkin ived and labored together in their sacrevocation all through this period, in perfect Christian brotherhood. Before, and during, and after Bishop Potter's journey o Europe, Bishop Hopkins, most probably at the instance of Bishop POTTER, (unless I am greatly misinformed) minis tered extensively iff this Diocese, and (x ercised Episcopal functions. It it not strange that in all this time, Bishop Hopkins, though his "Bible Views of Slavery" were known, should have escaped the in-
