WEDNESDAY, NOVEMBER II, 1863. The Union as it Was. The Constitution as It Is.

THE CONSCRIPTION LAW. A mejority of the Supreme Court of the State, have pronounced the Conscription only proved, what the Abolition leaders, who passed the bill in Congress, over and over again admitted. How many times did Thaddeus Stevens, the ferocious talked of observing the Constitution. which they had sworn to support? Ha treated that instrument, as he formerly did his conscience, by "kicking it to the devil." He never claimed, during the whole of the last Congress, to be govern ed by Constitutional considerations; bi justification, for violations of the Consti tution, was the law of "necessity," contending that the Constitution did not con tain sufficien: power to enable the Gov ernment to suppress the rebellion. He and those who followed his lead, including the President and his Cabinet, seemed to forget that they held their places in the Government in pursuance of the very Constitution which they found it necessary to set aside. Because, it necessity re quires the destruction of that instrument there is no law to sustain the President in the possession of his high office. Judge WOODWARD, in his able opinion, published in yesterday's Post states his position very clearly in relation to those who pass ed the conscription; he says "Presidents and Congressmen are only servants of the people, to do their will, not as that will may be expressed under passion or excitement, but as it stands recorded in the Constitution. It is the Constitution, indeed, which makes them Presidents and Congressmen They have no more power to set up their will against the Constitution, than so many private citizens would have. Outside of that they are only pa vate citizens. * * * place ourselves under desposic sway in pression of the rebellion-there was no need for a conscription act, and experi ence has proven it. Or, if there exists a necessity now for such a law, the Aboliblame for it. As long as they permitted our struggle to be one for the Constitugo into the war for any such nurvose s

Andrew, "swarm with volunteers." But this they will not do; this war they cannot afford to close until they use the armies to carry the next Presidential election.

JEFF, DAVIS' CORRESPONDENCE. Now that this year's elections are over we presume that we will have no more publication of letters, purporting to have been written by prominent Democrats, at tured correspondence alluded to, and now, we are told, in the possession of the War Department, there has not appeared anything from those fierce patricts Bax Bur LER, DAN S DICKINSON, JOHN COCHRANE, conspirators in their treason; and fearing, doubtless, that their correspondence might one day turn up, they joined the Administration party to escape hanging. If the letter written before the rebellion by JESSE aging the rebellion, would, if found, show
