Spicy Letter from General Leslie Combs to the German Abolitionists.

CARL SCHURZ

FRANKFORT, KY., Nov. 19, 1863.

To the Editors of the Louisville Journal:

I have read a note, published in your paper a few days since over the signature of Carl Schurz, commencing, as it seems to me, in very unbecoming terms for a man who, from his position in the army, is presumed to be allowed, sometimes, to associate with gentlemen—upon a remark made by me in a letter to a friend in New York, which found its way into the public prints, as to his conduct and that of his command at the battle of Chancellorville, as then presented to the nation by an eye-witness, and, so far as I have seen, not subsequently contradicted by any reliable authority.

After some considerable bluster, he, very considerately, informs me that he is "a first-rate pistol shot," and might probably kill me in a duel;" he therefore politely invites me to come to his headquarters, and "share his bed with him," &c.

Now, I am myself a very poor pistol shot, never having fired a pistol a dozen times in my life, nor practiced with any other weapon in order to become a dangerous duelist. Indeed, for more than fifty years I have had but little use of either arm, as can be ascertained by reference to the records of the War Department in Washington. But upon full reflection, first, considering his avowed opinions as to human color, and, secondly, being very particular in selecting my bed fellows, I rather incline to run the risk of a pistol shot, even from his skillful hand, in preference to sleeping one night with him in his own bed, not knowing who might have been my immediate predecessor.

Finally, I respectfully suggest that while Carl Schurz may obtain some unenviable notoriety, by passing over thousands of his cotemporaries, and making an onslaught upon an old soldier, whose history can not be unwritten by rebels or abolition fanatics, he has added nothing to his fame with those who know the difference between a brave man and a bully. Respectfully, yours, &c.,

LESLIE COMBS

How Sal Disgraced the Family—Marrying an Editor.

A traveler in the State of Illinois some years ago came to a lone log hut on the prairie near Cairo, and there halted. He went into the house. It was a wretched affair—an empty packing-box for a table, while two or three chairs and disagreeable stools graced the reception-room. the walls of which were further ornamented with a display of old rusty tin ware, and a broken shelf article or two. The old woman was wringing her hands and crying in the corner, and the old man, with his hand pressed upon his forehead, tears in his eyes and pipe in his mouth, sat on a stool, looking wretchedly sorrowful. Not a word greeted the interloper.

"Well," said he, "you seem to be in awful trouble. What's up?"

"Ah, we are almost crazy, stranger, and we ain't got patience to see folks now."

"That's all right," said the stranger not much taken back by the impolite rebuff; "but can I be of any service to you in all this trouble?"

"Well, we've lost our gal; our Sal's gone off and left us," said the old man in tones of deep despair.

"Ah! do you know what induced her to leave you?"

"Well, we can't say, stranger, as how she is so far lost as to be induced, but then she's gone and disgraced us," remarked the afflicted father.

"Yes, stranger, and—not as I should say it as her mother—but thar war'nt a pootier gal in the West than Sal; she's gone and brought misery upon her own head now, it followed the sickened mother.

"Who has she gone off with," inquired the visitor.

"Well, there's the trouble. The gal could have done well, and might have married Joe Gordon, a capital shoemaker, who, although he has but one eye, plays the flute in a lively manner, and makes a good livin. Then, look, what a life she has deserted; she was surrounded by all the luxury in the country," said the father.

"Yes, who knows what poor Sal will have to eat, drink and wear now?" groaned the mother.

"And who is the fellow that has taken her into such misery?"

"Why, she's gone off and got married to a critter called an Editor, as lives in the village, and the Lord only knows how he is to earn a living!"

A Snake Story.

During the Florida War, said the speaker, I was in the American Army. One day I shouldered my gun and went in search of game. In passing through a swamp I saw something a few feet ahead of me, lying upon the ground, which had every appearance of a log, it being some forty feet in length, and about a foot in diameter. So positive was I that I saw nothing but a log that I paid no attention to it; the fact is I would have swore before a court of justice that it was a log, and nothing else. You see I never heard of snakes growing to such huge dimensions, and the fact is I never should have believed it if I had. Well, between me and the log as I took it to be, was a miry place, which it was necessary for me to avoid. I therefore placed the butt of my gun on the ground before me, and springing upon it, lit right on top of—what do you suppose?

A boa constrictor, said one.

No.

What then?

Just what I supposed it was—a log, said the wag.

A Bride.

The Rockingham (Va.) Register publishes the marriage of Miss Lucy P. Roller, the daughter of a wealthy farmer in that county, and adds:

She was what we would call "an independent girl," sure enough. Her bridal outfit was all made with her own hands, from her beautiful and elegant straw hat down to the handsome gaiters upon her feet! Her own delicate hands spun and wove the material of which her wedding dress and traveling cloak were made, so that she had nothing upon her person when she was married which was not made by herself. Nor was she compelled by necessity of poverty to make this exhibition of her independence. She did it for the purpose of showing to the world how independent Southern girls are.
