

PITTSBURGH: FRIDAY, DECEMBER 4, 1863. The Union as it was. The Constitution as it is.

Where there is no law there is no freedom. Russia and Poland. It appeared from recent proceedings that Russia, the murderer of liberty in Poland, has quite a number of admirers in the United States.

Following close upon this demonstration, followed the big ball in the evening of the 29th, at which the speakers bitterly denounced the New York and other papers which were in the habit of publishing accounts of the Russian revolution.

On Monday evening last, however, there was held in a popular lecture, a meeting of the friends of Poland, it was a gathering which assembled to express sympathy for that suffering country.

By the ladies foreign arrival we see the following account of increasing brutality and credible atrocity and yet the authors appear to have their admirers in the United States.

General Lewczak, every winter who appears in the streets of Warsaw after night fall most carry a lantern, unless he is accompanied by a woman who provides for him. A householder and his wife with a returning home, the husband met a friend and both stopped for a moment on a highway; the wife, who had advanced a few steps, was arrested by a policeman.

A French Fleet off Brazos. A correspondent of the Boston Journal with the Banks (Texas) Expedition, writing under date of Nov. 11th, communicates the highly important fact that a fleet of five French steamers arrived at Brazos on the 10th, from Vera Cruz, for the purpose of watching, no doubt, the movements of Gen. Banks. The same writer adds:

Major Gen. Banks, accompanied by Col. Holabird, Chief Quartermaster; Col. Driley, Inspector General; Department of the Gulf; Major Wilson, Van Herk and several other staff officers, are still here. The presence of Gen. Banks was most fortunate. His influence undoubtedly prevented the revolution of Cobos resulting in turning the city of Matamoros over to the French population of that place. As it is, we can feel quite sure that Mr. Napoleon will have to fight before he can attempt to pocket the revenue of the State of Tamaulipas.

Army News in Church. A Piqua (Ohio) correspondent of the Cincinnati Gazette, writing on Thanksgiving day, tells the following story of a fighting man: "The glorious news from Chattanooga this morning cheered Rev. Col. Moody out of the opportunity of delivering the Great Thanksgiving sermon. We had met at the church in the morning, and in accordance with the President's proclamation, had sung the President's hymn, and then the singing of the national anthem, and a lighting preacher had scarcely got through with his introduction, when the Gazette arrived, was brought into the church, and handed to him by our patriotic sexton. The preacher stopped, paused a moment, and then shouted, 'Glorious news!'"

President long ago laid it down as a rule that America must not quarrel with France or with any power until the domestic struggle is over. It is then, we learn, the intention of the American Government (no matter who may be in power) to set its accounts with England. For that reason America is building 100 iron-clad ships of various sizes and of the most improved type.

The Strength of Grant's Army. The St. Paul (Minnesota) Pioneer publishes the following extract of a private letter written from the Army of the Cumberland previous to the late advance, which furnishes some interesting particulars as to the strength of Grant's force: "The Army of the Cumberland has been entirely reorganized by General Grant. You would be surprised to know the number of regiments down here between the Ohio and the Cumberland. We have the old Army of the Cumberland, two corps of the Army of the Potomac, a reserve, and others are coming. There are thirty regiments in a single corps of the Army of the Cumberland. No more regiments are to be sent to this country. They are now on the soil of middle Tennessee. I can see no show for Bragg, and without knowing the plans of our general, I confidently look for a speedy smash-up of his whole force."

Mr. Beecher and the Muskets for the Boston Commercial Bulletin relates the following incident of Mr. Beecher's experience on his return home from his recent trip to Europe: "When the steamer Asia, on her last voyage, reached Halifax, and the crew had just been landed, there was a large cargo which was to be landed there. It consisted of muskets for the British Army, and was being carried by the steamer. Mr. Beecher, who was on board, saw the muskets being carried, and he was very much surprised to see them. He went to the deck and saw the muskets, and he was very much surprised to see them. He went to the deck and saw the muskets, and he was very much surprised to see them."
