Admiral Sherman has so far advanced in his recovery as to receive his friends. The progress of his recovery, though slow, has been steady, showing the perfect preservation of his vital energies.

The Confederates have completely blockaded the Mississippi at the mouth of the Red river, by gunboats stationed on the Arkansas shore. Nothing but iron-clad can pass, and as there is no trade, so far has yet been made to raise the blockade.

The situation of affairs in the Army of the Potomac remains unchanged. The rebels have taken position on three prominent hills on the south side of the Rapidan, where they can observe all movements of our army. Two rebel intrenchments occupy Fredericksburg.

The release of prisoners have produced sufficient resources to increase the Navy Pension Fund to $1,000,000, and Secretary requests permission to invest all prize money in Government bonds and apply the interest to the payment of pensions.

Gen. Winfield S. Hancock, who was severely wounded at the battle of Gettysburg, has since been stopping with his father, B. R. Hancock, Esq., at Norristown, returned to his command, (the Third Corps) in the Army of the Potomac last week. His wound is quite healed, but he declines to return to duty notwithstanding.

The representatives of the press in Washington propose to tender a complimentary dinner to Hon. Seward, Editor of the First newspaper edited by the Speaker of the House. It is intended to be exclusively a "press" entertainment, to guests whatever being invited who are not directly connected with the press.

A Washington dispatch says: "Upon marching from Chattanooga, Gen. Sherman was placed in command of all the Union forces in East Tennessee by order of Major General Grant. The order has been approved by the War Department. General Sherman's headquarters will be at Knoxville. General Foster will be in command of the troops which were in East Tennessee previous to the arrival of General Sherman."

The War Department has consented to extend the time for filling up the regular army under the provisions of General Orders of June 25, 1862, and No. 888 of October 16, 1863, to June 25, 1864, during which the extra bounty of $300 will be paid. The enlistment for the regular army will hereafter be credited to the city or district in which they are enlisted. The usual premium of $16 and $25 will be paid to those furnishing recruits for the regular army, as well as for the volunteer regiments.

THE PRESIDENT'S MESSAGE.

This document, evidently the work of the President himself, is a satisfactory in some respects as any of the conservative could have expected.

On the question of reconstruction the President seems much perplexed; he gives a plan but accompanies it with the following comment:

"The objection to a premature presentation of a plan by the National Executive, consists in the danger of committing to points which could be more safely left to further developments. Care has been taken to shape the document as to avoid embarrassment from its course. In saying that on certain terms, certain classes will be pardoned with their rights restored, it is not said that other classes on other terms, will never be included. In saying that a reconstruction will be accepted if presented in a specified way, it is not said that it will never be accepted in any other way."

From these remarks we infer that the President is anxious for a restoration of the Union, and is willing to bring it about in the speediest manner.

The last dollar and last man fanatics, who insist upon the way containing until slavery is entirely extinguished will not find comfort in his suggestions. Mr. CHARLES SWANWICK's plan of reducing the States to territories, or conquered provinces, finds no favor, as yet, with the Chief Executive.

If Congress would proceed in the same spirit that breathes through the message, and by their speeches and enactments show the people of the South that we are anxious to bring them back into the Union, we would soon see the rainbow of peace. But will they do it? Will not the radical, through their party, carry out their infamous designs against the people of the South—designs and proceedings which enable Gen. Lee to issue such effective appeals as the following to his army, when expecting another engagement with General Meade?

"HEADQUARTERS 1ST NORTHERN VIRGINIA, November 26, 1863.—The enemy, again advancing upon our capital, and the country one more looks to the army for its protection. Under the blessing of God your valor has repelled every previous attempt, and, invoking the assistance of His favor, we cheerfully offer to Him the issue of the coming conflict. A cruel enemy seeks to reduce our fathers and our mothers, our wives and our children, to abject slavery; to strip them of their property, and drive them from their homes. Upon you these help less ones rely to avert their terrible calamities, and secure to them the blessings of liberty and safety. Your past history assures them the assurance that their trust will not be vain. Let every man remember that the battle does not depend upon the number of the ranks, but upon the courage of the heart, and the faith of the hand. In defense of a cause so sacred and worthy, the same word by this army on so many bloody fields."

But, hoping for the best, we adopt the following remarks of the Intelligencer: "When we reflect how largely the measures that shall be adopted by the present Congress must tend to give color to our national destiny in all time to come, it is safe to say that rarely has any body of men been called to act as the depositaries of issues involving so much of good or evil to this great people. Convened under auspices which give so much of dignity and solemnity to their deliberation, the Representatives of the Loyal States and people are now called, if ever men were so called, to pay aside passion and prejudice, that they may keep a single eye to the welfare of the nation, and that, in discharging all their duties under a profound sense of their responsibility to God and the country, they may be able by their wise counsels and prudent measures to restore union and peace through our borders, and transmit the blessing of a constitutional Government to our latest posterity."

WHAT DOES IT MEAN?

The Commercial, yesterday, returned to the discussion of "Nepotism," and after demonstrating that the monopoly of power, by certain families, was, and is, the cause of the decline and fall of all nations, besides being the destroyer of the spiritual and temporal powers of the Pope, our learned contemporary closes as follows:

"Well may intelligent men ask the question, Is the elevation of a particular family to position and power, the only object of men's ambition, and the only object of conventional or governmental power? We shall regret if our lucubrations should lead our readers to suppose that they are intended for no present and pressing purpose. It is the alarming and distressing increase of evil in our own day and country that induces us to give public attention to an evil which public opinion must recognize as the cause of our ills."

Our object in copying these brief paragraphs is, simply to inquire of our neighbors what they mean, and what they are all about? To what particular family does it allude? To the question, "Is the elevation of a particular family to power the only object of men's ambition," we emphatically and indignantly answer not and request our neighbor to be explicit in exposing the dark intrigues of the conspiracy family to whom it alludes. Let us see where the lurking reason is, that may help the Commercial in dragging the monster forth.

The Commercial, in its opening article on "Nepotism," alluded to the fall of the Tarquins of ancient Rome. Let it imitate the example of Lucius Junius who seized upon the outrage on Cornelia for driving the Tarquins hence. Like that noble Roman, let our neighbor watch and wait, and become the avenger of his noble brethren. It is not propitious to strike, let our learned contemporary, like Lucius Junius, lie low until the proper moment arrives. "Then strike till the last armed foe expires," &c., but in the meantime, let an impatient people know the particular family alluded to. We are burning with desire to find them out.

COL. MERRIN.

HEADQUARTERS OF THE CONFEDERATE ARMY, Chattanooga, Tenn., Nov. 14th, 1863.

GENERAL ORDERS, No. 276.

Colonel J. C. McKibbin, Additional Aid de Camp, having reported in obedience to Special Orders No. 11, of November 14th, from Headquarters Military Division of the Mississippi, is assigned to duty on the staff of the Major General Commanding the Department, to whom he will report in person.

By command of Maj. Gen. G. H. Thomas, Wm. D. Whipple, Brig. Gen. and Asst. Adj. Gen.

LOUISIANA'S RETREAT.

Eastern Tennessee, says the New York Herald, so desperately struggled for, is now, and we may well hope definitely, safe. General Logan, if he is still within the limits of that State, is anxious only about the safest way to get out of it.

His noble struggle, which the whole country has watched with intense interest, terminated successfully upon the arrival of General Sherman with reinforcements on the 8th instant, and the retreat of Logan on the same night.

Logan's line of retreat is up the valley of the Holston, which he may follow into Virginia. His infantry and transportation follow the valley on the south side of the river, which thus covers his left. His left is also covered and by the cavalry who hold the cavalry on that flank; on the 8th, and on the 9th, he had a fight with the enemy's cavalry in one of the passes. His dispatch indicates his intention to use his cavalry to the utmost and if he does so he will doubtless inflict severe punishment on the enemy. Sherman's cavalry is reported to be on the south side of the Holston; and the country is broken and had for cavalry, it is reported that this energetic officer may be able to hold the enemy's infantry until his own can come up, which we reasonably anticipate the destruction or capture of Logan's army.

On Monday the President announced the retreat of Logan by proclamation, and called upon the people "to render special homage and gratitude to Almighty God for this great advancement of the national cause." From these words we may gather the importance that the President attaches to this great success, and we think that he does not overrate it. By Logan's failure we see the rebellion compelled to relinquish its hold upon the last grand outpost by which it might have retained control over the interior and held the upper country in terms so grand a part of the Southern States. It is restricted to the line that follows the line of the Atlantic from Richmond to Mobile, shut up between the mountains and the sea, flanked on one hand by the Allegheny and the Cumberland Mountains, that divide the Northern bayonets, and on the other by the ocean, that teams with Northern gunboats. Its present territory is restricted to the three points of Richmond, Charleston and Mobile. Such a territory is certainly very narrow, and while it might possess a sufficient depth for natural defense, it will doubtless be demonstrated, that it possesses but little power of resistance.

THREE HUNDRED DOLLAR LAUSE.

An attempt will be made at the present session of Congress to repeal the three hundred dollar clause in the National Subscription Act. We have already pointed out the risk at the expense of the poor. It ought to be one hundred dollars, perhaps a smaller sum, that would place within the reach of all. But we are opposed to the repeal if the object is to have a commutation price fixed at all. If it cannot be reduced, let the three hundred dollar clause stand as is. A repeal of it absolutely would allow substitutes to fix any amount of money, and would work a general disavowal of the people. All countries, even monarchies, have their commutations, fix a pecuniary limit to substitutes, and if we adopt their law we ought to follow their practice. We hope every Democrat and conservative member will vote against the repeal of the three hundred dollar clause if the proposition is not to reduce it. The fact is, the Administration has raised by money, commutation for the number of the three hundred dollar clause, and the success of the repeal would be a general disavowal of the people.

SUPPLIES FOR THE PRISONERS AT RICHMOND.

Assistant Surgeon C. O. WRIGHT, of the 13th Ohio, and W. S. HOSACK, says the N. Y. Herald, has been released from Richmond. From information communicated by him and conveyed through other sources, it is ascertained that the supplies forwarded for the Union prisoners are delivered to them and that their condition has been much improved. The prisoners now obtain $10 in red notes for one dollar in greenbacks, while the rate in the street is from twelve to fifteen for one gold. Persons sending supplies for the prisoners by flag of truce should send only blankets, clothing and substantial food, as delicacies, except for the sick are not beneficial, and the rebel transportation is limited, and taxed to the utmost to forward such supplies. The Sanitary Commission are sending delicacies only for use in the hospitals, the bulk of their contribution being of the character indicated. The arrangements for the distribution of the supplies forwarded are said to be very good, and the distribution, as a general thing, made in good faith.

THE MURDER OF GENERAL MCCOOK.

General Thomas has ordered a Military Commission at Nashville for the trial of Frank Gurley for the murder of Brigadier General McCook, who, it is remembered, was shot while on duty in an ambulance, under very atrocious circumstances. Colonel J. F. Miller, Texas Cavalry, is indicted as the perpetrator of the crime. Gurley is in custody of the Union, and is in the hands of the military authorities. It is reported that Gurley was a witness to the murder, and was in attendance as a witness. Nashville Union.
