

THE RADICAL ABOLITIONISTS. The radical and destructive of the very extreme of Abolitionism, are, it appears, something too rapid in their development, to suit the policy of the Abolition leaders. WENDELL PHILLIPS has some positions taken by President LINCOLN in his late message, and the Times very pointedly took issue with that forceful disclaimer. The Commercial of this city, in its issue yesterday adopts the line of the Times and remarks as follows: "But slavery is only an incidental question, not, on our part, the cause of the war. The question of Abolition has nothing whatever to do with the question of loyalty. A pro-slavery man may be certainly and conspicuously disloyal. That man is loyal who is for maintaining the Government, crushing the rebellion, and preserving the Union, without regard to slavery. If slavery stands in the way of this result, he is for destroying it. If it gets out of the way he will not abandon slavery. This is the only line of distinction that can be drawn."

EXCHANGE OF PRISONERS. By the following proceedings in Congress in relation to the exchange of prisoners it will be seen white men must stand back for the black. Mr. MILLER, of Pennsylvania, submitted the following resolution, and demanded the previous question on its adoption: "Whereas, the entire people of the State are suffering from the Federal Union are suffering from the report of the exchange of prisoners, and whereas the common sense promptings of humanity should induce the Executive representative of the nation to take effect to alleviate their distressed condition and restore them to their homes; and whereas we are well informed that the number of Confederate prisoners in the hands of Federal forces is in excess of the number of Federal prisoners in the hands of Confederate forces; and whereas the exchange of prisoners, and the restoration of liberty without prejudicial regard to the rights of colored Federal soldiers and sailors; therefore, Resolved, That the President of the United States be respectfully requested to charge the matter of the exchange of prisoners between the United States and the so-called Confederate States to private individuals, and to be disposed of by the suffering white sons of the Republic; and that the President be authorized to restore to the service of the Government, their friends, and friends."
