PARTICULAR NOTICE.

There are many preparations sold under the name of Bitters, put up in quart bottles, compounded of the cheapest whisky or common rum, costing from 25 to 40 cents per gallon, the taste disguised by Anise or Coriander Seed.

This class of Bitters has caused and will continue to cause, as long as they can be sold, hundreds to die the death of the drunkard. By their use the system is kept continually under the influence of Alcoholic Stimulants of the worst kind, the desire for liquor is created and kept up, and the result is all to often attendant upon a drunkard's life and death. Beware of them.

For those who desire and will have a Liquor Bitters, we publish the following receipt. Get One Bottle Hoofland's German Bitters, and one with Three Quarts of Good Brandy or Whiskey, and the result will be a preparation that will far excel in medicinal virtues and true excellence any of the numerous Liquor Bitters in the market, and will cost much less. You will have all the virtues of Hoofland's Bitters in connexion with a good article of Liquor, at a much less price than these inferior preparations will cost you.

DELICATE CHILDREN,

Those suffering from MARASMUS, wasting away, with scarcely any flesh on their bones, are cured in a very short time; one bottle in such cases, will have a most surprising effect.

DEBILITY

Resulting from fevers of any kind—These Bitters will renew your strength in a very short time.

FEVER AND AGUE.

The chill will not return if these Bitters are used. No person in a Fever and Ague District should be without them.

From Rev. J. Newton Brown, D. D., Editor of the Encyclopedia of Religious Knowledge.

Although not disposed to favor or recommend Patent medicines in general, through distrust of their ingredients and effects; I yet know of no sufficient reasons why a man may not testify to the benefits he believes himself to have received from any simple preparation, in the hope that he may thus contribute to the benefit of others.

I do this more readily in regard to Hoofland's German Bitters, prepared by Dr. C. M. Jackson, of this city, because I was prejudiced against them for many years, under the impression that they were chiefly an alcoholic mixture. I am indebted to my friend, Robert Shoemaker, Esq., for the removal of this prejudice by proper tests, and for encouragement to try them, when suffering from great and long continued debility. The use of three bottles of these Bitters, at the beginning of the present year, was followed by evident relief, and restoration to a degree of bodily and mental vigor which I had not felt for six months before, and had almost despaired of regaining. I therefore thank God and my friend for directing me to the use of them.

PHILADELPHIA, June 28, 1862. J. NEWTON BROWN.

ATTENTION SOLDIERS,

AND THE FRIENDS OF SOLDIERS

We call the attention of all having relations of friends in the army to the fact that "HOOFLAND'S German Bitters" will cure nine tenths of the disease induced by exposures and privations incident to camp life. In the late, published almost daily in the newspapers, on the arrival of the sick, it will be noticed that a very large proportion are suffering from debility. Every case of that kind can be readily cured by Hoofland's German Bitters. We have no hesitation in stating that, if these Bitters were freely used among our soldiers hundreds of lives might be saved, that otherwise would be lost.

The proprietors are daily receiving thankful letters from sufferers in the army and hospitals, who have been restored to health by the use of these Bitters, sent to them by their friends.

Counterfeits.

BEWARE OF COUNTERFEITS—AS KUNKLE'S BITTER WINE OF IRON is the only sure and effectual remedy in the known world for the permanent cure of Dyspepsia and Debility, and as there are a number of imitations offered to the public, we would caution the community to purchase none but the genuine article, manufactured by C. BRANSTRUP pubishes his method of so doing, the ignorant and falsely modest are not dreadfully shocked, and think it a great sin for immortal and for condemnation and corruption among their wives, promising sons and daughters. Then family physicians decline to continue to keep them in the dark since that they do the same as DR. BRANSTRUP, (except publishing) but in a secretive practice making it last to them among strangers, for dollars and cents, mysterious and raised to ignorance, carrying on a loathsome, odious, &c., to dollars and cents, mysterious and wrong practice. Hence the sad, deplorable condition and appearance has been presented to health and vigor by DR. BRANSTRUP, resulting many in the ruins of manhood, many through him have been saved much suffering, poverty, imbecility and death. Spermatorrhea or nocturnal emissions, are completely cured in a very short space of time by his new remedies, which are entirely his own. Has also compounds from the Vegetable Kingdom, having seen the fallacy of the mercurial treatment, he has abandoned it and substituted the vegetable. Female diseases are treated with marked success—having had over forty years experience in their treatment in hospitals of both the Old World and in the United States, leads him to say—to all with a fair trial, health and happiness will again bloom on the now—pallid cheek. THE ARMY OF THE POTOMAC.

Review of the Recent Campaign South of the Rapidan—Deplorable Ignorance of Topography.

Special Correspondence of the Chicago Times.

ARMY OF THE POTOMAC, Dec. 20.

After throwing his army across the Rapidan Gen. Meade moved his army forward in three converging lines on roads relatively approximating segments of concentric circles. The innermost line was, of course, nearest to the enemy, and its route lay along the front of the rebel position. It was the shortest route to the appointed rendezvous—Robertson's Tavern; but also the most difficult because of the absence of any well defined road. In this respect a very grave blunder was committed that very nearly proved disastrous at the outset. It occurred, when the army commenced the march, that the topography of the country through which it was marching was wholly unknown—in fact, worse than unknown, since topographical maps had been prepared for the movement which not only omitted various essential details of the features of the country, but in those that were pretended to be given were radically incorrect. It was clear the maps had been made by guess, or from information that was designedly false. The route of march of the right wing was laid down as a straight and continuous road, whereas no road existed, and the route was only found by following a succession of narrow and tortuous wood paths through a dense and tangled forest, the whole way being impracticable for artillery or supply trains, or indeed for anything moving on wheels, necessitating the abandonment of all this paraphernalia of the column to follow when it could on the more easterly roads over which the rest of the army was moving.

The left wind was moved with scarcely less difficulty. Its roads were better, it is true, but the route prescribed for it demanded a march of almost double that of the centre, and nearly treble that of the right, while throughout it was following only indifferent cross-roads until it struck the main thoroughfare between Orange Court House and Fredericksburg, which it was fair to presume the enemy would attempt to hold as they did attempt.

The centre column had a plank road a portion of its way, then three or four miles of fair cross road—a main traveled highway—and then a good turnpike to the point of destination. Moreover its flanks were protected in the whole march by the movements of the other column and it has only to press on to the appointed rendezvous.

Such being the routes how look at the injustice of the orders. All partially wrong throughout and in every particular to the Commandant of this central column. His movements were made independent, while the other commanders were directed to keep in communication with him and govern themselves by his motions. They were to form junctions with him at stated times and appointed places, and support him if needed. There was no just ground for apprehension of any resistance to that column, while there was every reason to apprehend that the other columns would be resisted; yet no provision was made to support the other columns if they met with difficulties. The inference was clear that they were not only to take care of themselves but were to turn aside, if called upon, to repel any real or fancied danger to the central column.

One remark more on this point will more fully illustrate the injustice of Gen Meade's disposition in this respect. The right column was formed of the 3d and 6th Corps, commanded by French and Sedgwick respectively—the latter the oldest in rank and the former third, of the Major Generals in this army. The left was composed of the 1st and 5th Corps, commanded by Newton and Sykes—Sykes ranking as second and Newton as fourth on the list among the corps commanders. The centre was the 2d Corps commanded by Maj. Gen. Warren, the junior commander of the whole. Military usage, to go no further, assigns the immediate command of troops to the senior officer present; yet in this instance Gen. Meade conferred upon Gen. Warren the right to call to his aid the entire army if he should fancy himself in need of so much assistance, conferring upon him at the same time the right to command the four other corps commanders, all of whom were and are and always have been indisputably his seniors. This arrangement could but create jealousy and ill-feeling throughout the army.

The operation of the arrangement was as disastrous as might have been anticipated. The left wing met the enemy about midway of its march and was compelled to drive them the whole distance. The right wing came upon the rebels in force four miles above Robertson's Tavern and fought a desperate battle with them of four hours, duration, in which the casualties on our side were more than double those at Bristow Station—the only engagement that Gen. Warren ever fought. Gen. Warren himself found no enemy and met with no resistance until close upon Robertson's Tavern, when he came upon a light skirmish line of the rebels. This caused him to halt and forthwith send off right and left for reinforcements. Nor did it trouble him in the least that the main body of Lee's army were at that very time being hurled upon the 3d Corps—everything must come immediately and in all haste to his support. Was ever anything more absurd and ridiculous! The ultimate of the absurdity appears when, after fighting shy of them all day, waiting for help from the other wing of the army, at night the rebels withdrew from his front unattacked in that position, the threshing Gen. French had given two-thirds of their army in Locust Grove caused them to fall back to a new position. Had Gen. Warren pushed them during that afternoon their formidable position at Mine Run would never have been occupied by them, and we would have been able to press on to Orange Court House in pursuit of a defeated and retreating enemy.

In this particular it disclosed the key to Gen. Meade's failure on this campaign. Gen. Warren was made his favorite. Whatever of glory was to be won by a subordinate must be won by Gen. Warren and by no one else. Gen. French was censured for fighting at Locust Grove, whereas he had no alternative but to fight. Two-thirds of the rebel army was precipitated upon him. He must either fight or run. To run would have been to sacrifice his magnificent corps—the flower of the Army of the Potomac—the veterans who saved Chancellorville and won Gettysburg. By fighting he won a splendid victory, repulsing the enemy in double his own numbers, and causing them to fall back along our entire line—a movement, of which had we taken prompt advantage, that would have made the campaign a success despite the mistakes that characterized its inception. And yet because this fight was not conducted by Gen. Warren because it was conducted as it only could be under the circumstances, without the knowledge of Gen. Meade, and not in accordance with any plans that had been laid down, the old soldier who conducted it is sought to be disgraced.

But of this favoritism of the Commanding General there are more instances equally marked in their character and consequences. From Robertson's Tavern the army pushed on the next day to Mine Run, three miles distant, where the enemy were found to be intrenched on the westerly bank of the stream. Gen. Meade at once disposed his forces along the eastern bank of the stream for an assault. His line was formed with proper regard to the rank of
