Interesting Incident.

A few evenings ago an impromtu musical entertainment was gotten up in the Third ward school under the direction of Mr. introduced, who had just returned to this city from Philadelphia, where he had been the determination of those having the receiving instruction in the Asylum for that much care had been bestowed on him by those in charge of the Asylum. At the suggestion of a gentleman present, young have consented to the use of their names Doake addressed the scholars, and in the as honorary members, and the enterprise course of his remarks related the following touching incident: A few years ago he was feeling his way along Fifth street —always crowded—and was at times rude-ly jostled by the hurried pedestrians. Be ly jostled by the nurried pedestrians. De ins generolly toward, the sightless boy sat down to a limb in its service, has made arrangeing wearied, the signtless poy sat down to rest. Soon after a gentleman approached, and observing that he was blind, kindly inquired into his pecuniary condition. Being informed that he was poor, the sound that he was poor, the sound that he was poor, whom to apply to Government for the remainder of the sound that he was poor, whom to apply to Government for the remainder of the sound that he was poor, whom to apply to Government for the remainder of the sound that he was poor, whom to apply to Government for the remainder of the sound that he was poor, who was a sound that he was poor, who was a sound that he was poor, who was a sound to some the sound that he was poor, who was a sound to so the sound that he was poor, who was a sound to so the sound that he was poor, who was a sound to so the sound that he was poor, who was a sound to so the sound that he was poor, who was a sound to so the sound that he was poor, who was a sound to so the sound that he was poor, who was a sound to so the sound that he was poor, where the sound that he was poor, who was a sound to so the sound that he was poor, where the sound that he was poor that he was poo kindly inquired into his pecuniary tion. Being informed that he was poor, and without friends to assist him, he resolved to become his benefactor. Acting upon this good resolve, he sent him to Philadelphia to the Asylum for the Blind, where he will remain until he receives a thorough education. The simple recital of this incident by young Doake was very of the Brook's Headquarters of the Brook's Headquarters at Missonic Hallone week longer.
