It is confined principally to the valley of Oil Creek, a tributary of the Allegheny River, which it enters at a point about sixty miles south from Lake Erie. It is true that oil wells are successfully worked on the banks of the Allegheny for some dis-tance above and below the mouth of Oil Creek: still the county of Venango has monopolized almost the whole number of oil-producing wells in this region. There are some strange facts, that point to a history all unwritten save in some few brief sentences in wits and excavations, of oil operations along the Oil Valley. These detached fragments, like the remains of the Sibylline Oracles, but cause us to regret more earnestly the whole. A grand and wonderful history resting on the same grounds, which were, nent, but it has never been graven in the archives of time.
