D. H. HAZEN, Sec. HENRY SPROUL, Vice President.
Pittsburgh, Jan. 23, 1864.

ANOTHER VICTIM.

More than a year ago WENDELL PHILLIPS, the very Tycoon of Abolitionism, that the National Administration was but a mere committee, to superintend the next Presidential election; and he was right. We all know of the means used by the Administration, to bring Gen. MCCLELLAN into bad repute; we know of the thousand infamies resorted to by those in power to blacken the reputation of that officer, and the people are, also, aware of the dark intrigues used to get rid of Gen. FREMONT. These two prominent officers, having, in the estimation of the political gamesters at Washington, been disposed of, another has loomed up to cause them to tremble for the succession. Gen. GRANT's success at the head of the Western army, has alarmed the intriguers and their entire time and attention are now devoted to his destruction. The fate of MCCLELLAN and FREMONT is likely to overtake him. He is to be the next victim of the Administration's perfidy. That organization appears determined to not even tolerate any officer, whose talents or achievements attract popular admiration; they are, as PHILLIPS said, a committee, superintending the next Presidential campaign, their first and most important business being the killing off of all prominent opponents.

Gen. GRANT's military achievements having made him a shining and popular idol, is the next victim for the cold-blooded conspirators at Washington. He is too popular with the people; so detraction and calumny are executed to push him from the way to the White House, at Washington.

Last Summer Gen. CURTIS disgraced Gen. MCCLERNAND, for his conduct at the siege of Vicksburg. This McCLERNAND ...ilosophers whatever; but who is always ready to appropriate to himself credit belonging to more meritorious and valiant officers. For this conduct he was dismissed and disgraced by Gen. GRANT. The committee, which is superintending the next Presidential election, have recently found out that McCLERNAND was badly used by GRANT, and hence his late restoration to the army. This is, of course a direct slap in the face of Gen. GRANT, intended to make him restless and discontented. It is intended for the commencement of a correspondence, in which the combined genius of the Administration will be taxed to not only dismiss Gen. GRANT, but to—as in the case of MCCLELLAN—prove him a traitor to his country.

GLOSSING IT OVER.

The Judiciary Committee of the United States Senate has endeavored to whitewash Mr. HALE from the imputations made against him for pocketing $3,000 in procuring the liberation of Mr. HUNT from prison; but it has found it necessary, in order to give a finishing touch to the job, to mix a considerable amount of coloring with the white.

Mr. TRUMBULL, who was boss operator in Mr. HALE's case, has reported a bill prohibiting the acceptance of fees in such cases, as produced the temptation strong—too strong for the cupidity of the Senator from New Hampshire. The criminal is wholly exonerated; but the act will hereafter be deemed a crime. As mothers say to their spoiled progeny; do that again, and see if I don't punish you well. The criminality is recognized; but the correction is adjourned.

The purport of that clause of the bill, as reported by Mr. TRUMBULL is as follows:

"The provision forbidding members acting as counsel or agent in any court or before any commission is stricken out. The clause forbidding the acceptance of pay for services in connection with claims, contracts, accusations or arrests, before any department or military or naval commission, is retained, with the addition, "nor shall any head of Department, head of bureau, clerk, or other officer of the government." The fine is limited to $10,000 and two years imprisonment, "at the discretion of the court trying the same."

GEN. MCCLELLAN'S REPORT.

A member of Congress has written to the Philadelphia Age that he has already received over three hundred applications for Gen. MCCLELLAN's report, whereas he will be entitled to less than fifty copies. The object of a majority of the House of Representatives in thus limiting the number printed is obvious, but they will not accomplish their purpose. Already Messrs. Sheldon & Co., of New York, have announced an edition, and other publishers will find it to their interest to follow their example. Every one able to read will be anxious to have a copy of this report, and as the Abolitionists are determined to do all they can to suppress it, private enterprise must ...emand. It is a striking ... of this document, that ... should have thought ... suppress it for more ... even now are afraid to ...ed.

NEWS FROM GEN. BUTLER.

Expedition Up the James River.

NORFOLK, Va., February 2, 1864.

Forces Comprising the Expedition.

Shortly before dark on Saturday, an expedition started from here, under the command of Brigadier General Graham. It was composed of the army and gunboats Smith Briggs, Fora Temple, General Jessup, and the transport Long Branch, with detachments of men, to the number of one hundred and fifty, from the Third Pennsylvania Artillery, Twentieth New York Cavalry, Ninety-ninth New York and Twenty-first Connecticut Infantry.

Arrival at Logan Creek.

The expedition proceeded up the James River to Logan Creek, to the small village of Smithfield. Here Captain Lee, of the Norfolk harbor police, landed at about one o'clock on Sunday noon, with ninety men from the Long Branch. He took command of the party, and the boats then left to go up the Nansemond River to reconnoiter, it being understood that after Captain Lee and his command had accomplished what they intended, they would march down to the north-western bank of the Nansemond, and there again join the boats.

Captain Lee Encounters the Enemy.

Taking a direct road for Suffolk, he penetrated the country to the distance of about four miles and a half, where, in a dense woods, he met a force of the enemy, about two hundred and fifty strong, with two 12-pound guns. Notwithstanding the inferiority of our numbers, the rebels were completely surprised, their advance guard captured the main body driven back, and so great was their consternation that they finally retreated in the greatest confusion.

Captain Lee Intrenches Himself at Smithfield.

Information was then received from prisoners and darkies that there was a strong force of the enemy posted a short distance beyond, at a place called "The Mill." Their position was such that our men could not pass them on either flank, and consequently they were compelled to fall slowly back to Smithfield, which was reached about half an hour after dark. Captain Lee then intrenched his force on the main street of the town. Previous to this, however, as he was marching into the place, he was fired upon from both sides of the road, and his advance guard of five cavalrymen of the Twenty fifth New York, were captured.

A Fierce Attack by the Rebels.

About half past seven o'clock yesterday morning the rebels made a fierce attack with their cavalry and infantry. The fight continued with great vigor until nearly eleven o'clock, when a communication came under flag of truce, from Colonel Gordon, commander of the attacking forces, for an immediate and unconditional surrender.

Declines to Surrender

In order to gain as much time as possible, and thinking that in the meantime some assistance might come to hand, Captain Lee sent a reply to the rebel Colonel, asking for a personal interview to be granted. This was denied, and a peremptory demand was made for a surrender within five minutes. The second reply of Capt. Lee was, that he would not surrender, and that if the rebel commander wanted him, he would have to come and take him.

Gallant Defense of Our Troops.

In less than a quarter of an hour he opened with four guns, besides the infantry and cavalry fire. A reply was made with a howitzer as rapidly as possible, which was kept up with great spirit until about half-past twelve o'clock, when Captain Lee was so hard pressed on all sides that it became evident that he would soon have to yield.

The Smith Briggs Comes to Their Aid.

But ... position becoming untenable, the howitzer ... stream, and the men then followed along its line to reach the protection of the gunboat. They were followed by nearly a regiment of rebel infantry and cavalry, which harrassed them in their flight. A stand was then made opposite the Smith Briggs, and a desperate engagement continued until our men were completely overpowered by superior numbers of the enemy, which was continually augmented by the arrival of reinforcements.

Brutality of the Rebels.

While fighting so bravely our men were shot down without the least mercy being shown them. This these brave, patriotic men seemed to prefer rather than surrender to the rebel foe. All this time the gunboat kept up a constant fire but so great were the numbers that had to be contended with that our men had to give up fighting and take to the boat. To reach it, however, the poor fellows had to swim from the shore to where she lay in the stream, and in doing this many yielded up their lives to the merciless foe, who shot them as they were really drowning.

Captain Rowe, Wounded.

Upon reaching the boat Captain Lee found its commander, Captain Rowe, severely wounded in the throat. The engineer was also seriously wounded, and out of a crew of about fifty there were left aboard hardly a half dozen men who were not disabled. At the request of Captain Rowe, Captain Lee took command of the boat.

Damage to the Vessel.

He found her to be greatly damaged from the fire of the enemy. The pilot house was entirely demolished. The wheel could not be worked, and it was with much difficulty that the engine could be gotten to move sufficiently to propel her further out into the stream from the ranges of the rebel guns.

Surrender of the "Briggs."

Firing was continued, and about three o'clock a shell from the enemy entered the boiler of the boat, and a great explosion followed. Resistance could no longer be continued, as the boat was now a mere wreck. She then surrendered, and all on board of her were prisoners. Some, to make their escape from captivity, jumped overboard, and no doubt, the most of those who were not recaptured sealed their fate with a watery grave.

The Number Taken Prisoners.

Captain Lee, a Pamunkey Indian pilot, and George Smith, a volunteer pilot, with two other men, are the only ones out of the whole party, which in the aggregate amounted to nearly one hundred and fifty, that escaped, except two others who were sent out the night before in a small boat to report the perilous situation of the force under Captain Lee. These men were picked up near the mouth of the James River and taken on board the flag-ship of the navy that is stationed there. The mission was to go up the Nansemond River to report to General Graham for reinforcements, but, being detained, word did not reach him as soon as the exigency of the case required.

Captain Lee, and those escaped with him—five in all—walked about seven miles, when they fell in with the gunboats of General Graham going to their relief. They were taken on board of one of the boats, and reached Fortress Monroe last night about eight o'clock.

Fierce Nature of the Fight.

The gunboat Smith Briggs is a total wreck, and what remains of her is in the possession of the rebels. Nearly all our brave men who fought so valiantly are now prisoners. The most of them are supposed to be badly wounded. The number killed is not known, but it must be very large. The rebels, too, must have suffered terribly, as our men fought long, persistently, and to much effect. It is surmised that though the rebels were finally victorious, they lost at least three to our one in killed and wounded. The rebels greatly outnumbered us. They had a full regiment of infantry, one of cavalry and a battery of artillery, whilst our whole force engaged did not amount to over one hundred and fifty men.

Incidents, &c.

During the fiercest part of the shelling two small navy boats came up, and were apparently about to render assistance to the army gunboat, Smith Briggs, when their commanding officer was shot through the breast. They then immediately retired, as their officer was evidently badly wounded.

Heroism of Our Men.

Our men cannot be too highly praised for their valor, and it is to be greatly regretted that they suffered so much. The boats that reconnoitered the Nansemond returned safely.

NEWS FROM THE SOUTH.

The Richmond papers of Monday, received at Fortress Monroe, contain the following:

The Enemy Across the Rapidan—His Partial Repulse.

We learn from an officer who reached here yesterday, immediately from General Lee's lines, that on Saturday evening the enemy, in heavy force, crossed the Rapidan at three fords—Morton's, Raccoon Ford and Barnett's—the last about three miles from Orange Court House, and the others lower down the river. At last accounts the enemy was on the other side of the river, except at Barnett's, where firing yesterday morning denoted some action. It is supposed that this movement of the enemy is merely intended to engage Lee's attention, and to cover his movements on the Peninsula.

Richmond Threatened—The Yankees in Large Force at Tallevville.

Some days ago a report was obtained by the authorities here from a Yankee deserter, that the enemy was contemplating a raid, in considerable force, on Richmond. The report obtained consistency from a number of circumstances, and impressed the authorities to such a degree that a disposition of forces was made to anticipate the supposed designs of the enemy.

At nine o'clock on Saturday night a force of the enemy, numbers not known, but consisting of cavalry with some artillery, made a demonstration at Bottom's Bridge, and drove in our pickets.

The news was not generally communicated to the public until Sunday morning; the first signal of excitement being the tap of the alarm bell, which readily summoned the second class militia and the local forces in Capitol square, and at other places of rendezvous. A dispatch was also received early yesterday morning from Gen. Wade Hampton, at Hamilton's Crossing, stating that the enemy was threatening an advance. A train was dispatched to his relief. In the meantime out of excitement in Richmond had been suddenly produced the most wild and extravagant rumors, the enumeration of which would be idle and tedious.

Discovery of an Alleged Plot to Liberate the Prisoners and Assassinate the President—Arrest of the Ringleaders and Seizure of Documents.

For several days past the Government has been in possession of facts that hinted, beyond a doubt, to the existence of a secret organization of ill-loyal men, having for its object the forcible release of the Yankee prisoners held at the Libby and on Belle Isle, the assassination of the President, and the destruction of the Government buildings and workshops located here.

Captain Mucubbin, chief of the detective corps was assigned the duty of penetrating the mysteries of the case and threading the details through the labyrinths of rumor to their ... head, and ... detectives, Messrs. Reese and Mitchell, who immediately set to work, and on Saturday night they arrested, at his house on Seventeenth street, between Main and Franklin, a German named A. W. Heinz, a baker, upon the charge of being a prominent member of the treasonable association. He was furthermore charged with inciting Confederate soldiers to mutiny and the assassination of the President. The detectives seized along with Heinz a great number of the most important papers, including the roll of membership of the organization, and documents of such a character as to leave no doubt of his crime, and the criminality of others. The documents were taken possession of by Gen. Winder, who ordered Heinz to be placed in secure quarters at Castle Thunder, and to allow him no communication whatever with any outside parties.

Heinz, the reputed ringleader, has always been looked upon as a disloyal man, and his associates in treason are all pretty much of his own character and social standing. It is possible that other arrests will follow, as the treason will be probed to its depth, no matter whom it affects.

THE MALDEN MURDER.

The Confession of Green—The Stolen Money Recovered.

It was announced that Edward W. Green, postmaster of the town of Malden, Massachusetts, had been arrested and confessed to having murdered Mr. Converse, the teller of the Malden Bank, on the 15th of December last. The confession is one of the most remarkable in the history of crime.—Green, it appears, who is only 37 years of age, had always borne an excellent character previously, and has a wife and an infant child to share his degradation. It appears he was heavily in debt, and had lately paid several of his creditors, principally in Malden Bank bills. The Boston papers after giving the particulars of his arrest, adds:

After the search of Green's person he was conducted into an adjoining room, where he was informed that he had been followed and watched for some time. Thereupon—without any unusual emotion—he confessed his guilt.

He stated that on the day of the murder he visited the bank twice; the first time he found there a conductor, who left a pair of skates; the next was at half past eleven. Immediately on entering he went in to the directors' room, and seeing no one, he drew his pistol, a six-barreled Smith & Wessen revolver—placing the muzzle within a foot of young Converse's head and fired, the ball taking effect under or back of his ear. He instantly discharged a second barrel, the ball taking effect in Converse's temple, while his victim lay on the floor. After the consummation of the deed he seized the bills in the drawer about five thousand dollars, and went to his own office. He informed the persons present that a portion of the money was concealed in a piece of newspaper in an old boot in the postoffice. Six hundred and fifteen dollars were found as he had directed.

He further stated that the balance was secreted under the flooring in the attic of the Volunteer engine house, and on making search, three thousand four hundred and fifty four dollars in Malden Bank bills were found, making in all four thousand and fifty-nine dollars. This, with several sums paid by him, accounts for the whole amount stolen from the bank. He also stated that the pistol was in a drawer at his boarding house, and on going there it was found.

Green was brought to this city and committed to the tombs. The feelings of his wife on hearing of his arrest can better be imagined than described. The arrest has caused as much excitement as that following the arrest of Dr. Webster several years ago.

BOSTON, Feb 9—Garranged yesterday at Malden, ided not guilty to killing Conv robbing the bank, but guilty fire and burning a block of bu November.

☞ THE GREAT SECRET.—IT IS admitted by all physicians that the grand secret of healthful long life lies in keeping the blood and various solids of the body in a high degree of fluidity. When you feel continued pain in the head or bowls, or any continued uneasiness in any organ or parts of the body, you can prevent serious sickness by taking Brandreth's Pills.

Bleeding may give momentary ease, because the blood left will have more room. But as the body is made from the blood, and sustained by the blood, to waste or blood is to waste our life, and ruin our constitution. But Brandreth's Pills relieve the ovulation as readily as bleeding by only taking away what it can well spare, and THEY NEVER FAIL.

Mrs. Hooper, of Barnstable, Mass., was cured of St. Vitus' Dance General Debility, poorness of blood, and costiveness of many years standing, by Brandreth Pills. The case at length is published in the pophlets.
