The payment of the bonus to Captain Rodman was soon made a matter of dispute, on the ground, (utterly indefensible,) that the government was entitled to the gratuitous use of any improvement devised by an officer in its employment relating to the specialty under his charge To avoid dispute upon this question, Captain Rodman immediately transferred his interest in the invention to the firm provements in the process, which have made the casting practicable, were devised. Since this transfer Captain R. has received from the Government no royal, ty or bonus of any kind for the use of his patent. allude in this connection. The proprietors of the Fort Pitt Works have always met an active competition in contracting for the manufacture of ordinance, and have had no advantage over any other firm save in the superior facilities for manufacture provided at their own cost. It may be fairly presumed, therefore, that no higher price has at any time been paid them for ordinance than was demanded by others in the business. We quote as the ruling sales at the wells, $3,7624,00 \ bbi; at this point $4.7665,00, with a sale at $7,50, packages included. As near as we can estimate, not over $0,000 barrels of oil have gone forward by the river. This is probably the smallest amount oil ever shipped in a single rise in the Allegheny. The stock on hand here and upon the creek is exof the citizens of the Sixth Ward met in the stock on hand here and upon the creek is externely limited. We can't find over 35,000 to 40,000 barrels, and much of this is held by parties for the coming summer and fall trade. If there is any greater quantity than this it must be hidden away very effectually. There is as great deal of anxiety on the part of buyers here to contract with producers for the future flow of their wells. Producers for the future flow of their wells. Producers for the future flow of their wells. Producers do not look upon such propositions with much favor, preferring to take the run of the market prices. We know of one party who has contracted the flow of his well, about $250 bits per day at present, until the 1st of April next, at $3.50 per barrel, delivered at the well; the oil being conducted directly into the tanks of the purchaser, who is a refluer near at hand. The general impression here that oil will not fall much below the present figure during the coming season."
