

The Daily Post.

PITTSBURGH: MONDAY MORNING, FEB. 22, 1864.

Our readers will find an interesting article on the first page of today's paper. It is a full description of the Roman Catholic.

UNUSUALLY CANDID.

FERNANDO WOOD, the other day, in Congress, was desirous of having a committee appointed to investigate some sharp transactions of Gen. BEN BUTLER. The General, having heard of FERNANDO's proceedings wrote to a friend of his in Washington, when he made the following candid, but unexpected admission: "I will rely on your friendship to investigate, such investigations will show me the loyalty and fidelity of my officers, and for that I must suffer but I fear nothing else. I should ever be willing for them to be investigated by FERNANDO WOOD, were it not for the main, which I think catch."

SOMEWHAT CONFUSED.

The Gazette of Saturday, returned to the discussion of the Democracy's rebellion, but its conclusions were no longer the same as its previous efforts upon the same subject. Our contemporary seems somewhat confused, or it surely would not seriously attempt to hold a great party responsible for the utterance, or action of a single member of it. We stated that the Democratic party was the true party of the country, and we now renege it, and because FLETCHER WOOD, or any other person in the party, chooses to say and do silly things, does not, in the least, weaken our position. The Gazette might as well assail the Christian religion, because of the conduct of some of its professors, as to impugn the patriotism of the Democratic party because of the sayings of some of its members.

Important Case.

In the Supreme Court now in session in Philadelphia, on Friday last a case of some interest to our readers was argued. The action was against the Penn R Co for an alleged overcharge for freight on grain and flour carried by the defendants from Pittsburgh to Philadelphia, between Nov. 1, 1862, and March 3, 1862. The plaintiffs were commission merchants and dealers in grain and flour, citizens of Pennsylvania and residents in Philadelphia. They owned a flouring mill, in which, at which they ground the grain, and carried it to Philadelphia, and the vicinity. They carried the flour and grain from various States of the Union, by water to Pittsburgh, and there delivered it to defendants for transportation to Philadelphia. The defendants told sheet, or what they called local freight, carried from Pittsburgh to Philadelphia, at that time stipulated for 36 cents per 100 lbs. on grain and flour, and any person who owned grain in Pittsburgh, which had come there from whatever quarter, if he declared that the act of April 1862, applied to goods of the growth and manufacture of the State. To this ruling the plaintiffs excepted, and the case came to the Supreme Court, where it was argued and held under advisement.

22D FEBRUARY.

The following letter written by Hon. DANIEL WEBSTER thirteen years ago possesses a peculiar interest at this time. To the New York Committee for the Organization of the Militia of Washington.

WASHINGTON, February 22, 1851. GENTLEMEN: I have a source of deep regret to me, that my public duties absolutely prohibit me from having the pleasure, according to your invitation, in behalf of the Union Safety Committee, to attend a public meeting on the occasion, in honor of that auspicious day. As a citizen indeed, I feel good interest in the cause of independence, liberty, free government, the rights of a nation, the property, happiness and glory, hung over the hour when the eyes of Washington first opened to light.

You say truly, gentlemen, that the present moment admonishes us to rally in support of its principles, to express new and more determined character, and our gratitude for his parting lesson of patriotism and wisdom. You say truly, gentlemen, that the great duty of the hour is to stand by the principles of the Constitution, and to stand by the principles of the Union, and to stand by the principles of the Republic, and to stand by the principles of the Democracy.

And when his public career was drawing to a close, he left to the world, as his last gift, his most earnest and eloquent exhortation, to stand by the principles of the Union, and to stand by the principles of the Republic, and to stand by the principles of the Democracy.
