As far as it has been possible to ascer- tain it has terminated in a grand failure. Once in Florida and twice in the vicini- ty of Charleston our armieshave experi- enced serious reverses. Farragut has at- tempted the bombardment of the forts at Mobile without effect; Smith has been repulsed, and is now falling back upon Memphis; nothing is said of General Hurlbut's movement on the Yazoo; the reconnoissance in force against Dalton has been attended by no practical re- sults, and must consequently be looked upon as a failure; as to General Scho- field and Slocun, I am yet to learn that those two able officers have succeeded in driving out Longstreet from the impreg- nable position he occupies at Bull's gap. On the background of this picture, made somber yet by the remembrance of so many precious lives squandered away in a series of puny and, useless efforts, there is still any of hope, faint, it is true, but still alive and cheerful. It is that General Sherman may & ecome out tri- umphant of the struggle he has engaged against men and nature. If he succeeds in reaching Selma, and in occupying it permanently, this would, undoubtedly, compensate for our loss in other quarters. From the Richmond Examiner; We have, from two different sources each within the enemy's lines—the con- sistent story that Meade's army has been depleted by furloughs, and descriptions; that it does not number more than itsenty- five thousand men, and that it is generally believed in the North that it will atom the Rapidan, and move back upon Wash- ington, preparatory to the Spring cam- paign. In one instance this account comes from a lady recently from Warren- ton; in another instance, it is the relation of a Comfederate officer, escaped from Fort McHenry, who arrived in Richmond a day or two since. The latter reports that we heard, and that it was belived, in Baltimore, that the recent demonstra- tions of the enemy on the Peninsula were intended to divert attention from Meade's preparations for a retreat. These accounts have such uncommon intelligence and consistency, that we are inclined to attach much more credit to- them than to the usual clap trap of "re- liable ladies" and escaped prisoners. There is no doubt of the general fact, that but few remlistments are occurring in the Yankee armies, and that with re- duced forces they must find it wiry diffi- cult to hold all parts of that long milita- ry line, which extends from the thorpa- hannock to Jackson; in Missisting the days ago, that the Kentuckians.
