PITTSBURGH, THURSDAY MORNING, MARCH 17, 1864.

TWO HUNDRED THOUSAND MORE

Our telegraphic department, yesterday continued of our interesting President's call for two hundred thousand men, to provide an adequate reserve force for all contingencies.

This has been forehad for some time, and runs us into the third million of men called out to crush a rebellion, which abolitionism, at its inception, denominated a passing spasm.

The Chicago Times suggests an excellent plan to enable the President to avoid these frequent conscriptions. Let him, it says, concentrate our already enormous army and place it in front of the rebel armies. The rebels have not only two armies, one in Virginia, under Lee, and another at Dalton, in Georgia, under Johnston.

This is all very true, but to accomplish this the President will have to abandon his present operations, in scattering our forces about in different States, to enable them to, under his "one-tenth" proclamation to come back into the Union. He must cease his efforts for a re-election and turn his attention to the war not as Commander-in-Chief, but as coadjutor of our Generals.

Let him withdraw the forces that are accomplishing nothing, in Texas, leaving only a sufficient force to garrison a few prominent towns, to prevent blockade running. Let him remove from Jacksonville, in Florida, the remnants of the Olustee affair, either abandoning the place if necessary, leaving a small force to hold the town as a base of operations.

SOUTHERN NEWS

Another Expedition from New Orleans. The accounts from New Orleans notice, as the only military movement of the week, the departure of a portion of Gen. Lee's cavalry for some point to the West, probably Red River.

Banks has been for some time getting up a powerful cavalry force, which has been sent to the front. He is also well supplied with light artillery. His troops are nearly all regulars.

The forces which are to march from either point, New Orleans or Vicksburg, are overwhelmingly large. It is all the information I can gather the whole force to oppose them, uniting all together under Kirby Smith and all, will not exceed fifteen thousand men poorly provided in all respects, who will have to contend, with four times the number of the best fighting material, chiefly hardy westerners, with such forces following them up the best that the Confederates can do will be to retreat, and attempt to wear out their adversary in efforts to overtake them, which will probably be their policy.
