day. We mean the dependence upon YANKEEday. We mean the dependence upon an array of that which we cannot supply ourselves, or cannot so well or so cheaply do as can the Freight U.S. Mail... DOM for that which we cannot supply ourselves, or cannot so well or so cheaply do as can the Yankees. It is a law in political economy which cannot be slighted without injury to the welfare and progress of any community. We do not design to write our essay at this time upon political economy, we therefore leave our readers each to elaborate this axiom to suit himself and to conform to his own experiences or prejudices; our purpose is to redeem a promise made some days since. To notice the improvements in machinery introduced by Mestrs. King and Pennock to the BAGLE COTTON FACTORY. First, we must again refer to the Yankees—It is well known that the soil of New England is generally sterile, not well adapted to agricultural pursuits scarcely sufficient to feed its own population—that it does not abound in mineral wealth, it has however a large, frugal and industrious population whose labor they desire to make productive—they possess a large sea coast, unbouded forests of timber, inciting them to commercial pursuits. They desire to manufacture for the rest of the world, but they neither possess the raw material supplied by agriculture, nor minrest of the world, but they neither possess the raw material supplied by agriculture, nor mining—they have a large water power, but it is not available at all seasons and under all circumstances like steam power—for this they do not have fuel. To bring the fuel and the raw material together the cost of transportation must be added, hence with equal machinery, and cost of labor the point where the raw material and the fuel can be cheapest procured or brought together, is the point where manufacturers will be unusually a supplied by agriculture, nor mining—they have a large water power, but it is not available at all seasons and under all circumstances like steam power—for this they do not have fuel. To bring the fuel and the raw material specific they are they have a large water power, but it is not available at all seasons and under all circumstances it was stored.

simulate them to endeavorto energy and their natural disadvantages by their ingenuity, activity and industry. Thus, they are almost always in advance of the world in machinery used for manufactures; they endeavor to reduce the cost of fuel by improved steam machinery and more economical means of combustion, the secessity is so urgent, success heretofore has been so great so many minds being constantly on the stretch that it should cease to exerte our wonder and only lead us to admire and follow closely where we do not lead.

These truths are nowhere more apparent than in the case of cotton machinery, and whilst we response to the expenditure during the year 1862, a fraction lies than 20 per cent. While the increase in the cost of labor and supplies has been onconstruction and for additional equipments to the constitution passed finally.

in the case of cotton machinery, and whilst we might, and perhaps do, manufacture cotton with Western made machinery profitably, still more money can be made by adopting the improvements of our Yankee neighbors. Southern cotton, Yankee machinery and Pittsburgh business tact and enterprise are a combination which must succeed.
