in Philadelphia. The Philadelphia Age in speaking of Rev. Dr. O'Connor's Lecture in the Academy of Music, St. Patrick's day in Philadelphia says: Last evening Rev. Dr. O'Connor, late Bishop of Pittsburgh, lectured at the Academy of Music, before an audience that packed the building orchestra to amphitheatre. Dr. O'C. was until a few years ago the Roman Catholic Bishop of Pittsburgh, but was relieved at his own request from that charge by the Holy Seg. in corrections. that charge by the Holy See, in consequence of failing health. He then assumed the habit of the Jesuit, and in that humble position has done the Catholic Church in this country signal serolic Church in this country signal service. He is a native of Ireland, though he has passed the greater part of his life outside his own land.
