Thes. On that question of extension, of non-intervention, the Democracy North and South unhappily divided. The Consequences are upon us. I accept events as they transpire. Not responsible for them, yet not unobservant of them, I call the attention of the House to the bold strides which have been made since we last met, by fraud and force, to rush out the institution of slavery. I need not point you to the black recruit-ing system in Maryland and Missouri. I need not rehearse the orders of generals and subordinates all working to this and and subordinates, all working to this end, regardless of the rights of property or local sovereignty. Of course, these devilish rites are celebrated in secret, and most of the hors' rors that are perpetrated never come to light. In this case eight of the cannibals were detected and brought to justice. They had not only sacrificed children at They had not only secrificed children at their hideous alters, but had gorged themselves with the desh and blood of the victims. One of the negroes being questioned in prison, said with a leer, that the children "were good, tenders fingers best part." They, went to the place of execution shouting, laughing and dancing, and defying the soldiers to shoot them; for they insisted that the Obeah prisets would protect them against the balls. They fell, however, at the second round, and, according to the custom, the soldiers walked up to the bodies and fired a third round, with the muzzles almost touching the duivering muzzles almost touching the quivering flesh. Twelve negroes have since been arrested for the same crime, and will probably undergo the same punishment, broady undergo the same punishment, although the population, incited by the Obeah priests, threaten to prevent the execution by violence.
