Removal of the State Capital.

In a material point of view, that city | life. the great State of Pennsylvania should demand a vast improvement upon the present structures—they being neither adequate to the purposes intended, nor adequate to the purposes intended, nor always a favorite with our music-loving always a favorite with our music-loving always a favorite with she is about to the fact that she is about commensurate with the march of impeople, and the fact that she is about to provement. Philadelphia will take pride visit us will be received with the liveliin making the State Capital building and accessories, an object of State pride and interest.

As to historical associations, if w have any they are around and in the the birthplace of the first American Congress, if such things have weight in this matter, should commend that city to the favorable consideration of the individual

Above all other considerations, however, there is in Philadelphia, as pure a moral atmosphere—aye, purer, perhaps —as that of any place of equal population in the country. Let it be alleged that the Legislature itself corrupts by its associations, and draws around it all the elements of wickedness and dishonesty. Granting that this may be so, the mere fact of change from an already. corrupted region to a pure one,-from a the effect of bringing better men into the Legislature. Revolutions always have a purifying effect. This change, and an increase of the pay of members to $1,000, -which is necessary to draw from more remunerative callings men of worth and ability—cannot fail to bring to the public service a class of men now neglected in heart, and conscientiously honest.

another. The session should last but greenbacks sixty-days. Within that time all the general legislation of the Commonwealth could be transacted, which would necessitate a reform in the matter of so much of the present useless private legislation. These changes having been made, members of the Legislature would be enabled to take with them to the seat of government their wives and children would then exchange the miserable hotel life of Harrisburg for a quiet private residence, secure alike from the temptations to immorality and safe from the trying importunities of a horde of lobbyites and borers of every description. Under this order of things adjournment in the middle of the week to enable members to go home towards every point of Co., Philadelphia, has again arrived the compass, would be unnecessary; for He will remain in town for a few days every member, for the time being, would Pittsburgh and Connellsville Railroad.-A letter from Mr. Benj. U. Latrole, upon the subject of the difficulty between this Road and the Mayor and Councils of Baltimore, says, that the Myor's decision, and that the suit instituted in him in the name of the "Mayor and City Council" must fall to the ground. In speaking of the route chosen by the Mayor's party—by well. chosen by the Mayor's party—by way of Bedford and Burnt Cabins, Hagers-town and the Western Maryland Railroad to Baltimore,—he says there is this difficulty in its way: "There is no charter under which it can be built." His letter concludes as follows: "The recent Maryland Legislature was applied to by the Western Maryland Railroad Company for the right to extend their road from Hagerstown to the Pennsyl vania line, and granted it only on condition that the extension should be made to pass through Allegheny as well as

Washington County.
This effectually kills the Burnt Cab.ns' route, and confirms the "Independent" rout to the Maryland shore of the Potomac river, which it must pursue along side of the Chesapeake and Ohio canal to Cumberland. Thus, if the Connells ville road is to have no connection with the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad at Cumberland, it must still go to through that place if it is to reach Bal timore by a line wholly independent of that road. This settles the question of the eastern terminus of the Connellsville road, for two years at least, as the sessions of the Maryland Legislature are bisnnial. Will Pittsburgh be satisfied to wait so long to gratify the Mayor of ; Baltimore in his preference as to routes. for he repudiates the Potomac Valley route, as will also whoever is asked to
