Davis & Mollwaine last evening, Allegand Steubenville $44.75. This is a perturb to word not permit this ment to leave the care, because, as he said, they might miss the train. The poor fellows, therefore, got no supper, and steubence of mittee were greatly chagrined and disappointed at having the supper spoil does not the chronicler cotor his narrative a little more highly than usual because his subject is colored! How many white regiments are gone supperless, and, for that matter, because gone supperless, and more displicable and disappointed at matter of the subject should be taken of this hard the major appears and hout somebody's official only of the major who can command a negro regiment ought to be able to refer the total convert himself. Nevertheless, we cannot but repeated hims here on Monday morning on their way to join Burnside at Annapolis. The major of the regifend himself. Nevertheless, we cannot but reprehend the course of those who, having so sedulously striven to dignify positions of that character into the acceptance of white officers, now take it upon themselves to dragoon the acceptors into complete subserviency to the wishes of their sable charges and the able defenders of the same. It has become quite common to hold the officers of colored regiments to a strict account for every little harshness or peccadillo towards these capecial pets of abolitionism, and many for every little harshness or peccadillo towards these especial pets of abolitionism, and many pens are wetted with swift and dark-flowing ink, ready at a moment's notice to flourish a spread eagle-compilment or sweep away a reckless maligner. Thus it happens that the regiment that had its ovation and flag presentation in New York, a short time ago, was clothed in "bran new suits," and "presented a tine appearance?" that the regiments which passed through Baltimore, the other day, "were an imposing body of men," "that looking" and "their uniforms of the newest and cleanest;" and that those alluded to above were "stout and hearty looking fellows," "thoroughly armed and equiped," and "anxious to soon have an opportunity of revenging themselves on the brutal murderers of their comrades." of revenging themselves on the brutal murderers of their comrades."

Be assured the historian is not idle when Sambo is about. He has many salient points of interest—has Sambo, and it is important that he should be fostered and cultivated up to at least an average standard of righting qualifications. He dresses well, we are assured; drills well, we are told; and looks the warrioria every sense of the word, if we take the opinion of those who claim to possess the gift of seeing through him the dawn of a higher and more perfect civilization. If he has not as yet acquirted himself creditably in the field, it has not been for want of ample encouragement. With every assistance that power and resources could inassistance that power and resources could in-sure, and every apology for failure, he has not more than justified the expectations of those who are of little laith in his genius. Just now he is above par with those who de-sire to exact from him a pledge to 'avenge his alaughtered brethren at Fort Pillow, but rather low in the market with those familiar with his doings around Memphis, in Louisians and low in the market with those familiar with his doings around Memphis, in Louisiana, and elsewhere. The frequent doses of blarney which he has received from his numerous admirers of a certain class; the importance which has been attached to his color and condition, and the Presidential tendency to put him in the prominent place in all his specches, has inclined many a pale face to sigh for the sable plainage that works such marvelous and unexpected benefits. At the same time that these peeted benefits. prominent pace has his specens, has inclined many a pale face to sigh for the sable plimage that works such marvelous and unexpeated benefits. At the same time that those reasons make a white man wish to be a black one, they have implanted in the latter a germ of domineering self-conceit, that is fast leading to acts of insubordination, and savage barbarity entirely at variance with the picture which abolitionism has hitherto held up to the public view. Several times, within a short period, have Western white regiments and batteries of artillery been called to aid in suppressing mutinies and barbarities among the colored troops.
And still the farce of negro worship goes on;
still the President makes his pretty speeches about "Liberty," and still Congress strikes the word "white" out of the bills creating new States for the Union. More than this. It is hinted in the last rhetorical effort of the great joker that retaliation may speedily be visited hinted in the last rhetorical effort of the great joker that retaliation may speedily be visited by him upon white men, prisoners of the South, for the transaction at Fort Pillow. And then what? Why re-retaliation, of course. And then then? Then it will be arace which section of the people can excel in barbarity. Alas, poor negro, where are you drifting your white brethren?

White Below Par .- There is at least one white man in the United States who seems to se heartily and honestly ashamed of his color His name is Elizur Wright, and he halfs from the "Hub." The following are extracts from a letter of this poor demented creature, addressed to the Anglo-African:

"In view of the poverty of white intellect, as exhibited in this war, as a general rule, from the President downward, I should rejoice to see some colored man, Frederick Douglass for example, placed in the presidential chair."

Telegrams-A Complaint.-For some time past we have been annoyed by the receipt at a late hour of the night, of telegrams that are, to all intents and purposes, blank sheets of paper. The chirography is so faint that no eyes belonging to this office, at least, can decipher a word. Night before last there were two pages of this kind of stuif; the night before one pages and scarcely a night passes without more riess of the same sort. Can't the agent of the Associated Press remedy the matter? The evil is getting too serious and too common to be submitted patiently to any longer without a complaint and an apology to our readers for a deficient telegraphic column.
