When the Ordnance be-partment was recognized, in 1852, Lieutenant Symington was sponted a Captain in the new oorps, in which, after a service of thirty years, he attained the rank of ¿joinel. During ail that time he was constantly employed in the command of the principal Ordnance establish-ment, and was a member of the Ordnance Isoyrd, in the construction and Improvement of arsensis and armories and in perfecting the armanicat and equipment of troops and forts. The armory at Harper's Ferry leceived its principal improve-ments under his superintendence. The arsenais at Washington, St. Louis, Pittsburgh and Wat-ervitet all exhibited evidences of the industry and intelligence which he always brought to the performance of his duties. Colonel Symington's excellent qualities as an officer procured for him the highest esteem of his professional comrades, whilst his aniable disposition and unright character gained their "warm regard and affection as a friend. In all the places where he has been stationed, willing testimony to his good qualities will he borne by all classes of persons who were in any man-ner associated with him, and his residence among them will be remembered both for his own sake and for that of his amiable family, who were always ready to aid him in the exer-cise of the liberal hospitality for which his above do Smith, 110: Adam Wert, 57th; A A Brinker, 111h; Johnson Evans, Sth Reserves: John Kell, 102d; Hiram Robinson 57th; John A Jackson, 57th-W A Miller, 103th; M Keke, 102d; G Schrader, 61st; M L Westcoat, 57th; G, K.
