LOCAL INTELLIGENCE

FRIDAY MORNING, MAY 20, 1884. Row in the Diamond.-As we passed through the Diamond yesterday, between four and five elelock p. m., we observed a great grow before a grocery and a man named Ro ly intoxicated, striking and kicking several persons and threatening to fight any man in the crowd. The police were sent for an took possession of the belligerant, who struggled most desperately to get free. He was press ed through a crowd of hundreds of persons, who absolutely blocked up Diamond Alley so much that it was with great difficulty they got through at all, the prisoner in the meantime fighting the police the entire way. There was a strong force of the police present, but as he was intox icated they took his buffetings in perfect good humor. In fact if he had been in the hands of many policemen he would have been treated as harshly as he treated them. We think, however that their behavior was commendable, as there was force enough to take care of him without rough handling. He and another man whose name we did not learn were put in the watch house to await a hearing. We have no doubt that when these men become sobered up they will regret the course they pursued. It was the liquor and not the men that rebelled against the officers and the city authorities, but as it cannot be punished or atone for the offences comthe men who were foolish enough to swallow it will have to and ought to stand re-

Items from the Pittsburgh Catholic. On Monday the 16th inst., the Rt. Rev. Bishop of the Diocese celebrated Pontifica lHigh Mass at St. Philomena's church, Pittsburgh. During the mass he gave First Communion to about 14 persons, and at its conclusion, he preached an appropriate sermon after which he administe the Sacrament of Cinfirmation to about one hundred and forty persons, seven of whom were converts.... The Lecture of Very Rev. T. Heyden, on last Sunday night, in the basement of th Cathedral, was very well received. Despite the inclement weather, a large audience assembled to greet the venerable lecturer. Other duties prevented us from being present, but we hear on all sides expressions of the greatest satisfac tion with the lecture The St. Vincent de Paul Society attached to the Cathedral, confidently appeal to the ladies for donations of old , to supply the demand made upon them by the many poor under their charge.
