The Signal and Covington immediately rounded to and opened their guns on the batteries, and pushed up endeavoring to rescue the Warner from her perilous position. They had, however, as much as they could do to take care of themselves, the closs to take care of themselves, the cross fire of the three batteries cutting them up in a terrible manner. Their steam jobes were soon cut and their boilers perforated with shot, notwithstanding which they fought the batteries for five long hours the vessels being cut all to which they fought the batteries for five long hours, the vessels being cut all to pieces, and many killed and wounded on board. Acting Volunteer-Lieutenant Geo. P. Lord, commanding the Cov-ington, having expended all his shot, solved big guns set fire to his vessel.

spiked his guns, set fire to his vessel, and escaped with what was left of his erew to the shore, and his vessel blew up. The Signal, Acting Volunteer-Lieu-tenant Edward Morgan, still fought her guns for half an hour after the destruction of the Covington. He found it impossible to destroy his vessel by burning, her decks being covered with wounded, and his humanity forbade him sacriticing the lives of the noble fellows who had defended their vessel so gallantly. struction sunk her. General Banks, on hearing the news, sent out cavalry to hunt for the unfor tunate men, many of whom were pick-ed up and brought into Alexandria. A number escaped down the fiver, and went aboard same light draft gunboats all the disasters which may follow our went aboard same light draft gunboats that were coming up at the time to the scene of action, but were driven back by the superior artillery of the enemy.
