PILES OF

TWENTY YEARS STANDING

CURED.

Below will be found a certificate from one of the most respectable citizens of Wilkins township in regard to Dr. Keyser's Lindsay' Blood Searcher. The Doctor's certificates are within reach, and no one need be deceived in regard to his preparations.

DR. GEO. H. KEYSER:—I became afflicted with Piles about twenty years ago, and every year they were growing worse, so as to trouble me very much, so much so at times as to unfit me or work. Sometimes I was so bad that I could not do anything on account of them, they came out on me as large as a hickory nut. I had tried a great deal of medicine for them. I used to buy and take whatever I could hear of or read of in circulars and pamphlets that fell in my way, but I could not get cured, sometimes they would do me some good for a little while, but afterwards they would return again as bad as ever. I also applied to two Doctors who visited me at my house and gave me some medicine but it would not do, I could not get well. Over a year ago I got an advertisement of your Lindsay's Blood-Searcher, made by yourself—when you sold it to me you told me one bottle would not cure me, and that my whole system would have to be renewed by the medicine before I got well. I bought one bottle and took it home with me and used it according to your directions. I then called to see you again, when you said I could no expect much benefit from one bottle. I bought it on, one bottle at a time, until I had used five bottles. After this quantity had been used, I was entirely well of the Piles, which had tortured me for twenty years. In other respects my health is improved, and I am as well as could be expected for one of my age, being sixty years past. I have been well now for six months, and there is noappearance of a return of the disease; I can do any kind of farming work now without the Piles coming down and hurting me. I can pitch hay, chop wood, lift, or do any kind of work which before used to hurt me. When I found out your Blood-Searcher I kept on taking it until I got entirely well. I consider it my duty to make my case known to the county, for the benefit of others who may be suffering as I was and do not know the value of your medicine. You may publish this if you like—I live in Wilkins Township, and will be pleased to satisfy any one of the truth of this certificate if they wish to call on me.

ELLIOTT DAVIS.

December 24th, 1863.

☞ Look out the name of DR. GEORGE H. KEYSER on the cover of the bottle and pasted over the cork; also for his stamp on the United States stamp on the top of the bottle to prevent being imposed upon by a spurious article which is in the market.

MEDICAL.

IMPORTANT TO LADIES.

"Great American Remedy."

Harvey's Chrono Thermal FEMALE PILLS

HAVE NEVER YET FAILED (WHEN the directions have been strictly followed,) in removing difficulties arising from OBSTRUCTIONS, OR STOPPAGE OF NATURE.

Or in restoring the system to perfect health when suffering from Spinal Affections, Prolapsus, Uteri, the Whites, or other weaknesses of the Uterine Organs. The Pills are perfectly harmless on the constitution, and may be taken by the most delicate females without causing distress; at the same time

THEY ACT AS A CHARM,

By strengthening, invigorating, and restoring the system to a healthy condition, and by bringing on the monthly period with regularity. No matter from what cause the obstruction may arise. They should, however, NOT be taken the first three or four months of pregnancy, though safe at any other time, as miscarriage would be the result.

Each box contains 60 Pills. PRICE, ONE DOLLAR.

DR. HARVEY'S TREATISE

on Diseases of Females, Pregnancy, Miscarriage, Barrenness, Sterility, Reproduction, and Abuses of Nature, and emphatically the LADIES' PRIVATE MEDICAL ADVISER, a pamphlet of 70 pages, sent free to any address. Six cents required to pay postage.

☞ The pills and Book will be sent by mail, confidentially, when desired, SECURELY SEALED, and pre-paid on receipt of money by

J. BRYAN, M. D., General Agent,
No. 76 Cedar street, New York.

☞ Joseph Fleming, Druggist, corner of the Diamond and Market street, agent for Pittsburgh.

NOTICE TO ALL CONCERNED.—Among a certain class of self-important people there is a peculiar feeling of contempt attached to all physicians that advertise and treat the diseases named in this card, (PRIVATE DISEASES,) why this should be, they nor no one else can tell. Are they not aware that all physicians treat diseases of every denomination, in fact solicit just the very diseases that are so obnoxious to these very refined parties. I suppose they would not let one of their family go to a party that has devoted years for their benefit, because he advertises the fact, and their family physician says he is a humbug so he can get the case. Often he has almost deprived the party of his life. He comes at last to the physician that advertises—how else are they to know? Are they not aware that Sir Astley Cooper, Sir Benjamin Brodie, Sir Charles Ball and M. Paul Ricord devoted years in the treatment of these diseases? These men are held up as shining lights in the medical world; I don't assert that all men are worthy that publish, still there are a great number of them that are. I have devoted myself to the study and treatment of PRIVATE DISEASES upwards of 40 years, and without egotism can say I have saved hundreds from years of misery and untimely death. My treatment is confined to the vegetable altogether, as I think it is the best and most certain. It is in my power to bring hundreds of certificates, but I thought it necessary to certify to my general success; but my long residence in this city is sufficient proof without adding more. Spermatorrhœa and all diseases arising from it are cured in a much shorter time than heretofore. It behooves every young man and woman to be careful in selecting a physician. The different advertisements that are seen in our papers are of no worth, and no benefit will arise from answers than only loss of health and money. Hundreds are lost annually by my new remedies. THE BATTLE MONUMENT.

DEDICATION OF ITS SITE AT WEST POINT.

IMPOSING MILITARY DISPLAY.

Address of Major General M'Clellan.

He said in substance that all nations had days sacred to the remembrance of joy and grief. They had thanksgiving for success, fasting and prayers in the hour of humiliation and defeat, triumph and praise to greet the living laurel-crowned victor. They had obsequies and eulogies for the warrior slain on the field of battle. Such was the duty they had met to perform. The poetry, the histories, the orations of antiquity all resounded with the clang of arms. They dwelt rather upon the rough deeds of war than the gentle acts of peace. They had preserved to us the names of heroes and the memories of their deeds, even to this distant day. Our own Old Testament teemed with the narrations of brave actions and heroic deaths of Jewish patriots, while the New Testament of our meek and suffering Savior often selected the soldier and his weapons to testify and illustrate religious heroism and duty. Stories of the dead have frequently survived in the lapse of ages, the names of those whom fell was commemorated centuries ago. But although we have not now the names of the brave men who have fought and fell upon the plain of Marathon in the pass of Thermopylæ and on the hills of Palestine, we have not lost the memories of their examples. As long as the warm blood coursed through the veins of men—as long as the human heart should beat high and quick at the recital of brave deeds and patriotic services, so long would the lesson still incite generous men to emulate the heroism of the past. Among the Greeks it was the custom that the fathers of most valiant of the slain should pronounce eulogies over the dead. Sometimes it devolved upon great statesmen and orators to perform this duty. Would that a new Demosthenes; or a second Pericles, could arise; and take his place, for he would find a theme worthy of his most brilliant powers and touching eloquence. He did not come as the orator, but as the whilom commander and in the place of the fathers of the most valiant dead. As their comrade, too, upon many a hard fought field. God knew that David's love for Jonathan was no more deep than his for the tried friends of many long and eventful years, whose names were to be recorded upon the structure that was to rise upon the spot on which they stood. They had met to do honor to their own dead, who had freely given their lives for their country in this war, so just and righteous, so long as its purpose was to crush rebellion, and to save our nation from the infinite evils of dismemberment. Such an occasion should call forth the deepest and noblest emotions of the human nature. The monument to be erected was to commemorate the deeds and perpetuate the memory of a portion only of those who had fallen in the present unhappy war. It was dedicated to the officers and soldiers of the regular army, yet this was in no exclusive spirit, and in the act he remembered, with reverence and love, his comrades of the volunteer armies who had done glorious duty—fought and died at his side. Each State would no doubt commemorate the deeds of those valient men. How richly they had won a nation's gratitude; with that heroism they had confronted death, and wrested victory from a stubborn foe, and he knew that he but echoed the feeling of the regulars when he awarded the highest credit to their brave brethern of the volunteer service. The regulars had no State to look to for the honors due their dead. They belonged to the whole country, and could neither expect nor desire the General Government to make an invidious distinction in their favor. They were few in number; a small band of comrades, united by peculiar and very binding ties; for, with many of them, their friendships were commenced in boyhood, when they rested beneath the shadow of the granite hills, which looked down upon them where they now stood. With others the ties of brotherhood were formed in more mature years, while fighting amid the rugged mountains and fertile valleys of Mexico, within hearing of the eternal waves of the Pacific, or in the lovely grandeur of the great plains of the far West. With all, love and confidence has been cemented by suffering together. West Point, with her large heart, adopted the flowers of the country—graduated them, and in her eyes they were her children. She was jealous of her fame, and eager to extend her world-wide reputation of generals and private soldiers—men who had cheerfully offered their all for their dear country, equals and brothers in the presence of the common death which awaits us all—perhaps at the same hour and on the same field. Such were the ties which united the regulars—the most endearing that existed among us—such was the relations which bound them together. It therefore seemed proper that there should be erected an enduring monument to their brethern who had preceded them in the path of peril and of honor. What was the regular army, and who composed it? It was the very nucleus which to time of peace preserved the military traditions of the nation. It derived its origin from the old continental and State sires of the revolution, whence with some interruption and many changes, it had attained its present condition. In fact we might go beyond the Revolution to the old French wars. American regiments fought on the banks of the St. Lawrence and the Ohio, on the shores of the Ontario and Lake George, in the islands of the Caribbean and South America, Quebec, DuQuesne and Portobello, and in that school were educated such soldiers as Washington, Putnam, Lee, Montgomery and Gates. These and men like Greene, Knox, Wayne, Gates and Steuben, were the fathers of the permanent army, and under them the American troops acquired that discipline which enables them to meet on equal terms and defeat the tried veterans of England. The study of history would convince the most skeptical of the value of the permanent army in achieving American Independence, and establishing the civil edifice which the nation was now fighting to preserve. The War of 1812 found the army on a footing far from being adequate to the emergency, but it was rapidly increased, and, of the new generation of soldiers, many proved themselves equal to the requirements of the occasion. Lundy Lane, Chippawa, Queenstown, Plattsburgh, New Orleans, bore witness to the gallantry of the regulars. Then came an "interval" of more than thirty years of external peace, marked by many changes in the organization and strength of the regular army, and broken at times by tedious bloody Indian wars, of which the most remarkable were the Black Hawk War, in which the regulars met unflinchingly a foe as relentless, and far more destructive than the Indians—that terrible scourge, the cholera—and the tedious Florida War, where, for years the Seminoles eluded in the pestilential swamps our utmost efforts, and in which was displayed such traits of heroism as that commemorated by the monument to Dade and his command, when all fell save two, without an attempt to retreat." The Mexican War replaced the Indian combats and the monotony of frontier service, and for the first time in many years the mass of the regular army was concentrated and took the principal part in the battles of that remarkable war, Palo Alto, Resaca and Fort Brown, were the achievements of the regulars, and as to the battles of Monterey, Buena Vista, Vera Cruz, Cerro Gordo and the final triumphs in the Valley, none can say that they would have been won without the regulars. He would not proceed to the events of the recent past without adverting to the gallant Taylor, Worth, Brady, Brooks, Totten and Duncan. There was a sad story of Venetian history that told of the Doges of Venice whose portraits were hung in quiet halls. He wished for such halls to conceal from history the names of those now in arms, who were once our comrades, but no veil, however thick, could ever cover the anguish that filled our hearts when we look back upon the past and recalled the affection and respect we entertained towards men against whom it is now our duty to meet in mortal combats. Would that the courage, ability and steadfastness they displayed had been employed in the defense of the Stars and Stripes against a foreign foe, rather than in the gratuitous and unjustifiable rebellion, which could not have so long been maintained but for the skill and bravery of our former commanders. But we had reason to rejoice that upon this day, so sacred and eventful for us, one grand old mortal monument of the past still lifted high his head among us, and should have graced by his presence the concentration of this tomb. He might well be proud that we are here, commanded by the heroes who purchased victory with his blood near the great waters of the Niagara, and who repealed and eclipsed the achievements of Cortes. In long distant ages his name would be remembered, and be one of the proudest boasts and moving aspirations. In the present war the regular army had borne a most conspicuous part. Too few in numbers to act by themselves, regulars participated in every battle of importance in the east, and in most of those west of the Alleghanis. These terrible losses proved they had been in the thickest of the fight, and the testimony of their commanders showed with what undaunted heroism they had upheld their ancient renown. He could refer with pride to the glorious fields of Mexico, and exult in the recollection of what they did at Manassas, Gaines Mills, Malvern, Antietam, Shiloh, Stone River, Gettysburg and the great battles just fought from the Rapidan to the Chickahominy, and to the officers who have just risen from their midst and achieved great deeds for their country. Perhaps the proudest epoch in the history of the Regulars was the touching instance of the fidelity on the part of those commissioned officers and privates who were treacherously made prisoners in Texas, who resisted every temptation to incite them to desert their flag. Offered commissions in the rebel service, money and lands freely tendered to them, they scorned the inducements held out to them; submitted to every hardship, and when at last exchanged they avenged themselves on the field of battle for the insults offered their integrity. History offered no brighter example of honor than that of those brave men. Such was the regular army and such its history and antecedents. But why were they gathered together? This was not the funeral of one brave warrior, but the obsequies of the best and bravest of the children of the land who had fallen in actions almost numberless, many of them among the most sanguinary of which history bore record—the men whose names and deeds were now to be perpetuated in the highest roll of honor. Wherever rebellion showed its head, from far distant New Mexico, in the broad valley of the Mississippi, in the bloody ground of Kentucky, in the mountains of Tennessee, amid the swamps of the Carolinas, in the fertile fields of Maryland and the blood-stained thickets of Virginia, there they done noble duty. They were of all grades, from the General to the private, of all ages, from the gray-haired veteran of fifty years, to the beardless youth, of all degrees of cultivation from the man of service to the uneducated boy. It was impossible to repeat the roll of dead heroes, nor should he attempt to do so, but among the first in honor and reputation was that hero of twenty battles, John Sedgewick, gentle and kind as a woman, brave as a man could be, honest, sincere, and able, he was a model that all might strive to immitate, but whom few could equal. Like him, the white-haired Mansfield, after a career of usefulness, fell, the noble hero of many a hard fought battle. Lyons fell in the prime of life. The impetuous Kearney, and such Generals as Richardson, Williams, Terril, Stevens, Weed, Saunders and Hays, lost their lives in the midst of a career of eminent usefulness. Our batteries had paid their terrible debt to fate in the loss of Greble, Benson, Hazzard, Smead, Dr. Hart, Hazlett and Dimick. Beside these were hosts of veteran sergeants, corporals and privates, who had fought under Scott in Mexico. There was another class of men who had passed away since the war commenced, whose fate was not to die in battle, but who were none the less entitled to be mentioned. There was Sumner, a brave, honest and chivalrous veteran, who had faced death on many fields; who had told him (McClellan) more than once that he hoped that his long career would end amid the din of battle; but he died at home from the effects of the hardships of his campaign. The eloquent C. F. Smith, and the cool, intrepid John Buford, and the heroic Palmer, lost their lives by sickness contracted in the field. But he could not close this long list of glorious martyrs without paying a soldier's debt of official duty and personal friendship. There was one dead soldier who possessed peculiar claims upon his love and sympathy. He was an ardent patriot, an unselfish man and true soldier, the beau ideal of a staff officer—he was my aid
