

The Daily Post.

PITTSBURGH: THURSDAY MORNING, JUNE 23, 1864.

OLD AGE GOING AFTER GRANT. Mr. Lincoln, shortly after his nomination...

We accepted it for an object, and when that object is accomplished the war will end, and I hope...

Without stopping to discuss the matter, which the President and his party have in view...

There seems to be very little chance of General Grant's capturing Petersburg by direct attacks...

From Petersburg to Port Walthall, the Appomattox River runs nearly north...

On Thursday morning, Bernhardt's army, following Hancock on the Pamunkey...

On Friday, Wright with the Federal train came to arrive, and Lee's troops continued pouring into the city...

On Saturday morning, the Confederates, not of the Appomattox advanced from the Richmond Railroad...

On Sunday, the two armies mounted the same positions. Some advantage was made by the Rebels...

On Monday, the Confederates, not of the Appomattox advanced from the Richmond Railroad...

On Tuesday, the Confederates, not of the Appomattox advanced from the Richmond Railroad...

OUR RUINED NAVY.

Disgraceful Revelations respecting the New Monitor and Wooden Fleets.

Lincoln's Biographer on Secretary Welles The Court Journal Rousing the Head of the Navy Department...

Another Joke. We have been frequently struck with the Pittsburgh Gazette's propensity...

Correction. The concluding sentence of a little article in yesterday's Post on the designs of the Abolitionists...

THE PAST--A Reflection.

More costly and more successful in the annals of the world than have been offered up by the American nation...

W. H. A. F. I have been frequently struck with the Pittsburgh Gazette's propensity...

$70,000,000 THROWN AWAY.

The Navy Department has been accused of having thrown away $70,000,000 in the purchase of the Monitor and other iron-clad vessels...
