of this restoration, that they defy quo-tation, and even startle us in the very reading. If some Republican manager will only take thy material and work it up into form and figure, bring it out on the stage with sympathizing actors, we promise a full house, and should the spectators also be sympathetic, a tearrul, dolorous, tragic house. this very restoration is to be the only averter of all these ills, most of them already upon may the only restore of health and life and vigor to the bleed-ing mangled body of the State.

The only remaining argument consists in replying to the oil repealed saying that the recels would by down their arms and return into the Union on the restoration to power of the Democratic party; and the reply is the mere assertion that it would not be so, and, furthermore that it must be a craven people which could thus, by its vote; concede that only one party was fit to govern in this Re

Now, it is not very apparent how the aforesaid restoration would prove any craven spirit in the people, or at all demonstrate to the world that only one party is fit to rule, and that, defeated at the ballot, at would be entitled to resort to the bayonet. This is pure sophistry; for, however unjustifiable the secession of the South may have been, it certainly was not simply because the Republican party seceded to power, but because of its antecedents, its declarations, its plat forms, its proceedings, doggedly adverse, as they thought, to their interest in the Republic, and subversive of the thitherto recognized interpretation of the compacts and the Constitution, and violative of their rights and our duties. to the core with rusty, unpolished iron by the leaders of this party, it were no great wonder if they should feel the contact with surgeons so rough and rude and prefer a return to loyality in the Union under the milder and more genial sway of the Democratic party. We cer-tainly all know, for a wiser than we has taught us, that charity, love, covereth a multitude of sips.' We do believe most heartily that there is immeasurably more hope of the healing of the breach under the sway of Democratic administrations, than under the adopted and enforced policy of the present incumbents, adding inflammation to irritation. But that this would grow yout of any obsequiousness or any yield. ing of the right, on the part of the resto ration, it is a mere whim, or a passion, or a hypoerisy, to assert.

The key-note of this whole piece of fine, impassioned music is found at the close of the last bar. The Baltimore Convention will meet next month, and will place Mr. Lincoln before the American people as their candidate; and that he will be re-elected admits of no doubt.

This may all be so, but is is yet prophecy, and here there are, even now the opening of seals which mutter thunders, and which may descend in lightningbolts, and peal the bark from this prophetic tree, blast its trunk, wither its foliage, and leave its imaginative creafor sitting himself, smitten, at its roots, to look on its utter prostration.

That there are loud and powerful demands for a postponement of the Baltimore Convention, and serious opposition to the renomination of Mr. coln by that Convention, admits now of no doubt, for trumpet blasts are heralding it every day.

In your patience, therefore, ye hideous Democratic demons! possess ye your sonls, calmly awaiting the issues of the hour, remembering; the meanwhile, that God helps them who helps themselves, nors those who honor Him. The bald assertions about the noble State of Ohio, that 'it would have been almost as decisively as South Carolina,' in the event of Vallandigham's election, and that, 'had he been defeated by a small majority, his party would have taken arms against the State Government, and Ohio would have done nothing for the national cause, are both monstrous in conception, flagitious in utterance, revolution-ary in tendency, and utterly unworthy of any reply.—Knickerborker.

General McClellan Justified by General Grant.

Prom the Herald. From the dilemma of the uncomfortable necessity of a siege into which General Grant's campaign from the Rapidan to the Chickahominy had apparently brought him he has brilliantly emerged on the banks of the James river, where he now initiates an entirely new series of o crations against the rebel army. Grant's movement to the James, and his et iblishment of a new base there, is a magnificent judgment between the Administration and Ceneral McClellan. It endorses General McClellan's manœuv re, and justifies in the amplest manner all that we have ever said of that sol-dier's great genius, When Gen. Mc-Clellan was practically in the position that Grant is now in, and when with a sustable reinforcement his chances who advised that functionary, and then followed a series of awful disasters. Mc-Clellan was ordered from the James river by the new Alexander who had asordered the weather to be propitious and our neighbor was candid enough to forbidding any other procure gold, and forbidding any other provision for the that year. Mr. Lincoln's reason for orthe roads dry on a certain say early in that year. Mr. Lincoln's reason for or-dering General McClellan from the James river was this.—We had fifty thousand men on the James river and fifty thousand on the Rapidan, and the rebel army was between these two bodies. Conse quently, to operate effectively, the two bodies should unite. If the army on the Rapidan went to the to the total successful and the restance of the Rapidan went to the total successful and screening any other provision for the future than its actual possession, it compels importers and dealers in evclange to keep considerable quantities by them found respect. The time may come, the time may come, and thereby disconstitution will will prove imperative—when it will be independent of the future than its actual possession, it compels importers and dealers in evclange to keep considerable quantities by them to meet their occasions, and thereby dismisses the quantity available in the market. The other way in which the bodies should unite. If the army on the was between these two bodies. Consequently, to operate effectively, the two bodies should unite. If the army on the Rapidan went to that on the James, joined that on the Rapidan, Washington could be defended, though it was not threatened, and Richmond could be men. aced, and menaced only. Consequently the argument was in-favor of sending the force on the Rapidan to the James.

PARTY AGAINST PATRIOTISM. Ever since Mr. Lincoln—two years ago-gave way to the importunities of his satellites to shape his public conduct blocks in his way, which had first to be removed. Gen. McClellan the favorite of the conservatives of the country, would prove a failure. In the very crisis, therefore, of his operations he was baulked; his promised re-inforcements were held back, and the ingenuity have in Congress a set of noodles too stipld to learn even by experience.

When the bill authorizing the Government to violate its plighted faith and sell the gold pledged for the interest of the public debt was under discussion, one member of Congress stated his confident opinion that, if it passed gold would not, for the ensuing two years, be above 135. Other advocates of the bill did not name figures, but they equally put themselves on record as believing that a great reduction in the price of gold would be the consequence of its passage. The bill passed, and the consequence was, that those silly predictions were put to shame. Gold has steadily advanced in price ever since.

both a confession of, and a persistence in, the folly that prompted the former. A confession, because, if the former bill had accomplished its object of bringing down the price of gold, there had been no need of this; a persistence in the same folly, because, equally with the abortive measure it succeeds, this bill assumes speculation to ve the cause of the high price of gold, and supposes that the laws of trade can be countervailed by legislation. Now mark how plain a tale puts this olly to the blush, and covers its advocates with derision!

The price of gold opened yesterday orning at 1991; it closed, at 5 P. M., at 208; having been, some parts of the day, as high as 110. So it will be seen that this congressional blunderbuss aimed at the laws of trade, has more than missed its mark-it has "kicked its owner over." A statement of these figures, so as to secure a re-election, he has followed their instructions with marvelous though a stunner, is but an imperfect presentation of the case. Gold bounded up yesterday eight or ten por cent., not only in spite of the new bill, but in spite of a special effort of the Government to control the market and keep it down.

GENERAL MCCRELLAN srecent oration
West Point seems to have bothered the Republican press amazingly. They can find nothing in it they can criticise with safety, and so the wise ones who sie strongly committed to the administration let it severely slone. The Tribune blunderlingly undertook to open fire at short range, but was kicked over by the recoil of its own guns, as in the same article it admitted that the rebels were the allies of the radicles, and that they both worked together to bring about a dissotion of the Union.

can press cordially recognize the devoted loyality, and high moral and mental qualities, of the author of the oration. The Cincinnati Times speaks of it as the utterance of a brave soldier, and the Commercial of the same city, a very strong Republican journal, after editorially quoting portions of it, says:
Now we must infer from this that General McClellan sympathizes with the cause of the United States; that he approves of men standing true to the old flag, and honors those poor, but glorious, private soldiers who resisted the bloss. private soldiers who resisted the blan-

And again:
General McClellan, further along, speaking of the fall of brave men in this war, fighting under the old flag, says:
"Shall such devotion as that of our dead comrades he of no avail? Shall it be said, in after ages, that we lacked the rigor to complete the work thus begun?
