BATURDAY MORNING, JUNE 25, 1864,

ous rolle at our ARMY.

sean In the Post, a few days ago, we directed attention to the statement of Senator ed usurpation! Wilson, chairman of the Military Committee in the U. S. Senate, that since the 17th of October, 1863, the War Department has raised 800,000 white, and 100,000 black men for the service, and spent $125,000,000 in bounties. Mr. Wilson was speaking of the necessity of additional troops; in the course of his observations he remarked that General-GRANT has, since his present campaign before Richmond began, received rein forcements to the number of 48,000 men. These reinforcements were required be-

MR. Wilson-I do not know. Mr. Johnston-Do von know how many men are now in the army? Mr. Wilson I do not, and if I did I should not feel at liberty to say, because it has been the policy of the Secretary of War to keep it from our people. From this it will be seen that all the chairman of the Military Committee knows about the army is, that more troops are needed in order to supply the places of those who have gone to their long homes. But still the little information he has imparted enables us to arrive sat the conclusion that we have in the service not a man less than a million. If we have not, then what has become of them? Since the 17th of last October, seven months ago, we have recruited 700,000 men, who cost in bounties $125,000,000; at that time we must have had a like number already in the field. Making, then, the most liberal allowance for our losses since, the inquiry returns, what has become of this immense army, and why is it that a sweeping conscription is talked of? We either have men enough in the service to crush the rebellion if properly handled, or we have, from the beginning, been cursed with the most ismentable imbecility at Washington. We are quite sure that the latter cause of our failure is the true one. · Nothwithstanding all this, however, the President now, in the teeth of his late speech at the Sanitary Pair in Philadelphia predicting the hasty capture of Richmond and collapse of the rebel Confederacy, appeals to his friends in Congress to repeal the $300 exemption clause, because the service imperatively demands it. And because Congress is not disposed to oblige him in this remorseless request, we are told that "depression and gloom pervade the Capi-

While the nation is according to the Administra tion's own showing, upon the eve of dissolution, with "depression and gloom pervading the capital," we see our President having his gawky proportions conveyed from one place to another, retailing worn out sneedotes, which were considered stupid when first invented.
