For the Posts. DEAR EDITOR:—I slept soundly last night. Looking as I do upon actual, bloody strife as a non-combatant (as friend Greely would say) the prognostic cations contained in your paper for some months past to the effect that not only another draft but several others would be made before the rebellion would be crushed, kept me rather restless. Last fall we were told to elect Curtin and avert the well and the well and draft, but now it seems it was only a joke. On yesterday I perused with delight a lucid article in the Gazette headed "The Military situation—Filling up the ranks," the Lebanon Branch railroad to a small —wherein it says we must have more men, giving us the consoling and truth-WEDNESDAY MORNING, JUNE 29, 1864.
